Dictators Hit By Bankhead As Roosevelt Cites 'Perils'

Alien Influences Threaten America, B'nai B'rith Warned.

Program Praised As Democracy Aid

Foreign Domestic Acts No Concern of U. S., President Says.

President Roosevelt, in a message read last night to 1,000 Jews gathered at the Willard Hotel for the B'nai B'rith banquet, warned against "alien influences" that "seek to undermine the foundations of our own institutions."

At the same time, Speaker Bankhead, of the House of Representatives, in a scathing attack on dictatorships, referred to the present German government as "one-man absolutism almost without parallel in the tide of time" and to Mussolini as "a dictator answerable only to his own passionate and imperial will."

The President's message, read by his son, James Roosevelt, told members of the Jewish fraternal order that "this Nation remains unshaken in its devotion to the ideals and the institutions of democracy. Except in so far as we deplore ill-treatment of human beings anywhere, the domestic policies of other nations are of no concern to the United States," President Roosevelt said.

Calls Dictators Weak.

Bankhead expressed the conviction that, contrary to the prevalent fear that democratic government is doomed, "dictatorships are in far greater danger of perishing than are the democracies."

"How do these governments maintain their power?" he asked. "By striking fear into the hearts of men; by the processes of iron regimentation of the daily lives of their people, enforced at the hazard of concentration camps or the firing squad.

"Let the dictators beware; no people has ever remained in permanent subjection to despotism. No power on earth can forever destroy the innate passion of a people for personal liberty."

He condemned specifically "the duping of peoples by deceptive propaganda" and the "mock plebiscites" held "to lend color to the pretense of democracy."

Bankhead significantly included Czechoslovakia in a list of democratic countries which form "a body of public opinion invulnerable in their might against the assaults of any or all totalitarian states."

Lawless World Pictured.

The speaker opened his address, entitled "Democracy in a Changing World," with a picture of the modern world as "a world, in part at least, of lawlessness and broken promises; of revolutions, civil wars and conquests by force of arms; of women and children among other non-combatants slaughtered behind the lines of battle in carnage of unparalleled savagery; of widespread political and economic upheaval and of ruthless deprivation

Germans, Czechs Open Negotiations On Trade Issues

Berlin, May 9 (U.P.).—Germany and Czechoslovakia today began delicate trade negotiations which many Germans believed may be Hitler's opening wedge in a campaign to bring 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans into the greater Reich before the end of this year.

Japan's Planes Level Village and Kill 370

MISS DOROTHY CLAWSON.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Suchowfu, Kiangsu Province, May 7 (delayed).—Japanese bombing planes on May 5 destroyed the town of Nansuchow, 50 miles south of this city and killed hundreds of persons, Americans reaching this key city in the Chinese Lunghai defense line said today.

The Italian Catholic mission was wrecked and 100 persons killed there. There were 270 others killed in the mission area.

Miss Dorothy Clawson, of Montclair, N. J., a Presbyterian missionary known among Chinese as "the Angel of Anhwei," was described as the heroine of the raid. With another American Presbyterian missionary, Harry Van Dyke, she saved scores of Chinese women and children.

Large areas in the city of Kweiteh, west of here on the Lunghai Railway also were destroyed and the military hospital there was leveled.

Dr. R. B. McClure, international Red Cross director for Honan Province, reached here after touring the devastated areas, and described the raids.

He said the entire area around the Italian mission in Nan-Suchow was a shambles and that he counted 370 corpses—all Chinese.

"Terrified Chinese rushed to the mission compound believing the Italian flag would assure their safety," he said. "They had just crowded inside the walls when three demolition bombs hit. Then the planes returned and dropped incendiary bombs. One of them went right through the Italian flag.

"Chinese troops defending the city were without anti-aircraft guns so the Japanese planes could fly low, enabling accurate aerial machine gunning of the streets."

The American Presbyterian Mission, outside the city walls, was not hit and it was there Miss Clawson cared for scores of wounded and protected women and children.

Move to Lift Spanish Arms Embargo Lost

Swift Series of White House Parleys Buries Hopes This Session.

All likelihood of the United States lifting its embargo on arms to Spain in this session of Congress appeared dead last night, despite intense pressure recently placed on Government officials to make it possible for Spanish loyalists to obtain such American assistance in their civil war.

Following President Roosevelt's return early yesterday from his tenday fishing cruise, a quick series of conferences and statements definitely removed expectation of action on the Nye resolution to make possible shipments of munitions to Spanish government forces.

Reports that President Roosevelt and the State Department would favor the Nye resolution, in response to a communication of inquiry from Senator Pittman (Democrat) of Nevada, seemed to have been definitely laid at rest after the President conferred, separately, with Secretary Hull and Congressional leaders.

Rayburn Admits Discussion.

Following the White House talk, House Floor Leader Rayburn, of Texas, said the neutrality legislation had been discussed incidentally and that, personally, he is opposed to any effort to "monkey with the neutrality act now." He expressed belief also that the House will not agree to any change in the act at this session. He added that he had received "no indication" that the President will propose any change.

An even more definite stand was taken by Representative McReynolds (Democrat), Tennessee, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, who declared forcefully:

"The House committee has no intention of reporting out any change in the neutrality act at this session. "If a bill of that kind should come

By the United Press.

Geneva, May 9.—Emperor Haile Selassie was reported tonight to be ready for a spectacular airplane dash from England to Geneva to plead for his Ethiopian throne after the League of Nations Council, in a stormy secret session, agreed to admit Ethiopian delegates to its deliberations.

The right of the Negus to sit in the critical deliberations, while Great Britain asks League powers to recognize Italian sovereignty over Ethiopia, was upheld after Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff, of Soviet Russia, shouldered Ethiopia's defense.

To Admit Delegates.

"Ethiopia will be admitted without prejudice to any principles and without raising any question of credentials," an authoritative Anglo-French source said.

This was taken to mean the Ethiopian delegates would be admitted to the public sessions to furnish information, but that Council members would not necessarily recognize the Negus as the Ethiopian sovereign.

Victory for Selassie.

The decision constituted a victory for Haile Selassie in his last-hour efforts to prevent world recognition of Italian sovereignty over Ethiopia.

Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese Ambassador to Paris, meanwhile charged the Japanese are using gas on the Shantung front in a desperate effort to break China's resistance.

Other problems before the council involved the plight of Austrian and Rumanian Jews. A meeting Tuesday will hear a British report of the new Anglo-Italian friendship treaty and discuss the Spanish and Chinese conflicts.

Baby's Eye Removed as Jury Chooses Blindness Over Death

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 9.—Six-week-old Helaine Judith Colan was given her chance for life today—even though it may be one of blindness.

A tribunal of 14 specialists, holding in their hands the power of life and death, voted unanimously for removal of the affected left eye of the tiny victim of retinal glioma and thus possibly to halt the progress of the malignant growth eating its way to the brain.

Within an hour after the vote, the brain, eye and X-ray specialists gathered about an operating table in Garfield Park Hospital where the operation was performed.

"The baby stood the operation in fine shape," Dr. Robert H. Good, who performed the surgery, said.

"We took out the left eyeball and a half inch of optic nerve as it leads from back of the eye to the foramen (opening) into the spheroid bone. The eyeball was considerably enlarged, indicating presence of a tumor. The baby is in good condition."

He said the eye would be placed in a fixing solution for two days before he examines it with his scalpel and microscope.

A conference of eight X-ray specialists then will decide whether the right eye also is affected and whether it should be removed.

The 14 specialists upon whom the life or death decision rested conferred an hour and 15 minutes at the Midwest Athletic Club, just around the corner from the hospital.

They were invited into the case after days of anguished indecision on the part of the young parents, Dr. Herman Colan, 30, and his pretty wife, Estelle, 22.

House Enacts D.C. Tax Bill Of $5,100,000

Also Accepts Juvenile Court Report, Rejects Taxi Compromise.

Realty Levy Boosted to $1.75; Beer to Pay $200,000.

By James D. Secrest.

The House yesterday approved conference reports on the District revenue bill and the Juvenile Court measure but rejected the agreement on the taxicab insurance bill.

Overriding opposition of Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, the House adopted the tax bill which provides $5,100,000 to balance the local budget by a vote of 94 to 32.

The taxi insurance bill, which evoked a more heated debate than the revenue measure, was turned down 197 to 113 on a roll call vote, because it failed to include a provision permitting organized cab operators to file $75,000 cash bonds with the Public Utilities Commission in lieu of insurance policies.

Senate Action Doubted.

The measure was returned to conference with instructions to the House managers to insist on the original House bill. It appeared doubtful the Senate would accept the House amendment.

Action by the House followed weeks of intensive lobbying against the Senate amendment by representatives of organized cab operators, who sat in the gallery opposite the Speaker's rostrum throughout the debate.

Following nearly three hours of debate and voting on the tax and taxi insurance reports, the House adopted without discussion the juvenile court agreement, which now awaits Senate approval.

House acceptance of the business privilege tax written into the revenue bill by the Senate marks the end of legislative action that has extended over four months.

Before the House had voted, however, two bills were introduced in the Senate to amend the business privilege act. Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, proposed amendments to (1) exempt farm co-operatives from the gross receipts tax and (2) to exempt from the license fee of $10 "any person whose deliveries are not made from a fixed location within the District of Columbia."

The tax bill, which now goes to the White House, is expected to raise $5,160,000 in the next fiscal year from th following sources: 25-cent increase in the realty rate above the normal of $1.50, $3,000,000; business privilege tax, $1,900,000;

Martin Demotes Aide in Duel for Auto Union Rule

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 9.—Conflict among members of the United Automobile Workers' International Executive Board was intensified today by the disclosure that President Homer Martin had demoted Assistant President Richard T. Frankensteen.

Although Martin said he expected the board meeting, which opened today, to be entirely harmonious, some observers predicted a bitter fight over Martin's action and on other proposals to curb Martin's power.

One board member said the idea of attempting to unseat Martin was abandoned two weeks ago as impossible.

Martin returned Frankensteen to the status of vice president, where he will be on equal footing with four other vice presidents.

Nazi Helium Sale A 'Closed Matter,' Ickes Declares

Following a conference with President Roosevelt yesterday, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes stated that export of helium to Germany was a closed matter as far as he was concerned, and he had no intention to revive the question at future White House conferences.

Subject to order of President Roosevelt, Ickes can permanently block shipment of the non-inflammable gas in accordance with the law forbidding exportation of helium to a foreign country in sufficient quantities to be of military importance.

Ickes' statement preceded by a few hours a dinner at the German Embassy tendered to Dr. Hugo Eckener, German dirigible expert, who intends to make a personal appeal to the President to permit the sale of enough helium to inflate a successor to the ill-fated Hindenburg.

Senate Votes Record Farm Relief Fund

The Senate appropriated $1,104,000,000 for the country's farmers yesterday—the biggest single farm appropriation bill ever to pass the chamber.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, declared that "Government expenditures for the farmer have increased six times in the last ten years and I'm not convinced that the farmer is one bit better off."

Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, in charge of the bill, said:

"While the bill carries more money than any ever approved by the Senate we must remember that the Government is doing a lot more for the farmers all the time."

Half Is for Benefits.

The bill was swished through the legislative mill in about two and one-half hours, unprecedented speed even for a body notoriously warmhearted toward the farmers, particularly in election years.

The biggest single item was $500,000,000 for benefit payments to farmers who comply with the new crop control program embodied in the farm act of this session. The House, in passing the bill, had sought only $485,000,000, but the Senate subcommittee made it an even half-billion dollars. In all the Senate added $50,000,000 to the measure, which now goes to conference.

Subsidy Is Hastened.

Only two major changes were made in the House bill. Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, obtained approval of a provision speeding up payment of a $130,000,000 subsidy on the 1937 cotton crop to growers complying with the Agriculture Department's farm program.

The addition of $25,000 to the Forest Service's funds for administration of lands purchased by the old Resettlement Administration was another change in the bill, which includes $6,500,000 for the Farm Credit Administration, $26,000,000 ($1,000,000 more than the House) for a start on Government crop insurance, applying first to wheat; $1,800,000 to redeem Government certificates in the 1933 cotton pool, and $187,500,000 for Federal highway aid.

A substantial difference between Senate and House bills appeared in the program of aid to tenant

'Plot' to Kidnap President Scouted By Secret Service

Secret Service agents spent five hours yesterday investigating a reported plot to kidnap President Roosevelt for ransom, attributed to a prisoner of the Washington police.

Last night an official of the Treasury Department, which has charge of the Secret Service, declared there was "no basis" for prosecution of the prisoner and that the investigation would be dropped.

Washington police identified the prisoner as Chalmers Waldorf Kennedy, 46, of Charleston, S. C., manager of a roadhouse on the Mount Vernon highway. According to Detective Sergt. Eugene Davis, he is held without charge "for investigation" of about $800 worth of bad check complaints.

Treasury agents said the man admitted "plotting" a kidnaping, but said he did it two and a half years ago and that the victim was to have been the late Andrew W. Mellon. They quoted him as giving up the idea as being "too much out of proportion."

Lifer 'Repudiates' Bassett Murder

Seattle, May 9 (AP).—De Casto Earl Mayer, 43, life-term convict, tonight "repudiated" his two-day-old confession of the James Eugene Bassett slaying but said he would "take the rap" to save his mother.

Mayer, brought here from the State prison at Walla Walla, was not allowed to see his mother, Mrs. Mary Eleanor Smith, 72, whose statement her son killed Bassett here ten years ago preceded the signed admission of guilt Mayer gave Prison Warden J. M. McCauley Saturday.

2 G. O. P. Shifts Speed Wage Bill; Roosevelt Regains Relief Rule

Revision Follows White House Talk

By Robert C. Albright.

Direct control by the President over outlays for WPA relief projects was restored to the Administration's spending-lending bill yesterday in an eleventh-hour change in the measure.

The $2,519,425,000 bill for work relief, public works and incidental aids to recovery was introduced in the House by Chairman Edward T. Taylor of the House Appropriations Committee.

Final approval will be given the measure at a full committee meeting this morning. Immediately thereafter the House will open ten hours of general debate.

Parley at White House.

The change in the sub-committee's draft of the bill, empowering the President to pass finally on individual WPA projects, followed a White House conference earlier yesterday attended by Works Project Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, Public Works Administrator Harold Ickes, Budget Director Daniel Bell and House leaders.

Previously sub-committee leaders had announced abandonment of the existing plan of "lump sum" relief appropriations by appropriating the money direct to the agencies that would spend them.

This provision, which leaders said was satisfactory to the President, was retained in the bill. But marked in pencil, into the final draft of the measure, in the section detailing WPA spending powers, were the words: "subject to the approval of the President."

The bill previously had provided that only PWA appropriations were to be expended by the Public Works administrator "subject to approval of the President." Presidential approval had been required in past WPA and PWA programs. Ap-

World Bank Finds U. S. 'Priming' Failure

Basil Switzerland, May 9 (AP).—The Bank for International Settlements, in its annual report today, said the experiences of the United States proved "the mere stimulation of consumption by Government expenditures" does not provide a durable basis for an upswing in business activity.

The present economic situation in the world, the report said, "may be said to be less dangerous" than the "world depression of 1929 to 1932."

Discussing the United States, the report said:

"Recovery in the United States in the past few years was not, in fact, marked by large development in new investments and capital equipment. There was better use of productive activity already existing, but no wide-spread increase in capacity.

"This seems to prove the correctness of the assumption that only a rise in the rate of new investments can provide a more durable basis for an upswing in business activity."

School Makes Congressional Wives Orators

House Matrons Are Now Prepared to Deliver Talks Back Home.

Congressmen's wives are secretly taking lessons in public speaking for use when called on "back home" to say a few words, and yesterday, The Post learned, was "graduating" day.

Several wives of Congressional members carried off high honors for accomplishments during the 12-lesson course held exclusively for Congressmen's wives.

Mrs. Harry Englebright, wife of Representative Englebright, Republican of California, was voted by the graduating class to be the "most accomplished speaker."

Mrs. Jed Johnson, wife of the Congressman from Oklahoma, was voted as having become the "most improved" speaker.

Mrs. Colden to Run.

Mrs. Charles J. Colden, whose husband, a Representative from California, died about a month ago, will use the knowledge learned in the classes to gain his seat in the House, according to one of her friends.

The classes are conducted by Mrs. Hugh Butler, who has taught public speaking for years at George Washington University. They are held each week in the exclusive Congressional Country Club here.

It's a lucky politician whose wife can talk informally with luncheon Rotarians about the charms of the home district; or to the high school boys and girls about the high lights of Washington; or to the local woman's club.

In these many effective ways can the Congressional wife acquit herself in public, sans twiddling belt or lorgnette or standing on one foot, when she has finished Mrs. Butler's course—and all to the undoubted benefit of her husband's future.

Court Won't Let Labor Board Withdraw Case Against Ford

By the Associated Press.

Covington, Ky., May 9.—The Ford Motor Co. today blocked efforts of the National Labor Relations Board to withdraw from court the record of its case against the firm.

Amending its ruling of last Friday—permitting the board to withdraw the documents—the Sixth United States Circuit Court of Appeals directed that the papers be made a part of the Ford company's suit to set aside the contested order of last December 22. Several motions incident to the suit are before the tribunal.

Ford Chief Counsel Frederick H. Wood, of New York, described the court's ruling as a "victory for Ford," and declared its effect would be to prevent the NLRB from rescinding the order which directed reinstatement of 30 workers in Michigan plants, discharged for asserted union activity.

The next step, he said, would be up to the board.

Philip G. Phillips, ninth regional director for the NLRB, cited comment by Judge C. C. Simons during the hearing that if the board's order were vacated, all questions (raised by Ford) would be "academic," and declared the board could rescind the order, thus "eliminating certain issues as to validity of the board's procedure."

Meanwhile, in Chicago, the Labor Board moved to set aside its precedent-setting decision against the Inland Steel Corporation—first employers directed to sign a contract covering any collective bargaining agreement reached with labor.

The board announced that next Thursday it would serve formal notice upon Inland attorneys that "unless sufficient cause to the con-

Mapes and M'Lean To Change Votes

Chance for Passage Believed Increased by Development.

By Sidney Olson.

Two Republican veterans who have been outspoken opponents of the wage-hour bill, last night laid aside their prejudices in order to permit the House to consider the bill next week.

The switch of Representatives Carl E. Mapes, of Michigan, and Donald McLean, of New Jersey, both minority members of the House Rules Committee, will have these immediate effects:

Permit the rules committee, probably today, to reverse its former 8-to-6 vote against granting the wage-hour bill right of way to the floor, by allowing passage of the new O'Connor resolution waiving the rules.

Allow Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), New Jersey, Labor Committee chairman, to call up the battered bill before May 23, which previously has been the earliest possible date for its consideration.

Vastly increase the prospects of both the bill and early adjournment, as every major figure in the fight is convinced that the time element is one of the most vital in the bill's chances.

Filibuster Hinted.

The action of Mapes and McLean came in the face of the extraordinary pressure, unprecedented in House history, with which the Norton petition, blasting the bill from the clutches of the Rules Committee, was signed up last week.

It followed by a few hours the first sign of leadership in a possible Senate filibuster against wage-hour legislation at this session. With no Southern Senator thus far willing to take the lead in opposing the legislation, the statement yesterday by Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, that "there will be opposition" was regarded as significant.

It was understood that Harrison, while the possible nucleus of a last stand against the apparently uncrushable legislation, was more likely to make a vigorous fight for the milder bill which the Senate passed last year, in line with the evident preference of Southern Democrats for a bill which does not impose the

Belgian Attache In Treasury Talk As Currency Falls

The threatening position of the Belgian belga, following recent devaluation of the French franc is understood to have been the subject of a Treasury Department conference disclosed yesterday.

Secretary Morgenthau revealed that Baron Herve de Gruben, counsellor of the Belgian Embassy, had conferred with Wayne C. Taylor, fiscal assistant secretary, shortly after the franc devaluation was announced last week. The Secretary would not disclose the nature of the conference.

The Belgian currency has been hard hit by the French action, which was followed by a considerable withdrawal of capital to Paris. Gold reserves of the National Bank of Belgium have declined $70,000,000 since the first of the year. As a result, the possibility of a devaluation of the belga was being discussed here last night.

Conferees Vote President Right To Fix Ship Size

By the Associated Press.

The Administration's program to spend more than $1,000,000,000 for a bigger Navy moved a step nearer enactment yesterday when a Senate-House conference committee agreed on a compromise draft of the measure.

Chairman Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, said the program probably would be taken up in the House today. Final approval there would insure Senate passage this week, he said. Then the measure would go to the White House.

The conference group approved a provision giving the President discretion over the size of three new battleships authorized under the bill.

45,000-Ton Ships.

Walsh said the President could authorize ships of 45,000 tons each under the provision, which is similar to one approved by the Senate. The House had voted to limit the vessels to 35,000 tons.

The conference committee approved a $3,000,000 authorization for a new dirigible on condition the President deems such construction necessary. It eliminated a House-approved authorization of $12,000,000 for promoting inventions.

As it passed the Senate, the bill authorized a total of $1,156,000,000 for naval construction, or $35,000,000 more than the sum approved by the House. Should the projected battleships be limited to 35,000 tons and should the dirigible construction be authorized, Walsh said the measure would aggregate $1,099,000,000.

Plane Carriers Included.

The compromise included a provision authorizing two new 20,000-ton aircraft carriers voted by the Senate. The House had voted for 15,000-ton carriers.

The compromise also authorizes 9 cruisers, 23 destroyers and 9 submarines, as well as 950 airplanes and 26 auxiliary vessels.

The conference group voted to apply the Walsh-Healy act to all construction under the program, except when the President decides otherwise. The act provides a 40-hour maximum work week and minimum wages fixed by the Labor Department.

Meanwhile, Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, asked the House Naval Committee to approve a $28,000,000 shore construction program to keep an expanding fleet ready for battle.

The program includes fleet maintenance, $9,610,000; aeronautical requirements, $8,047,900; ordnance depots, $2,483,500; supply facilities, $530,000; hospital facilities, $800,000; radio stations, $122,500; training, education, welfare and housing, $7,158,000.

The construction would be carried on on both seacoasts and in Alaska and Pacific insular possessions.

Leahy told the committee developments ashore have not kept pace with increases in the fleet and "we have now reached a point where the efficiency of the striking forces afloat and in the air will soon be seriously impaired by the absence of shore facilities."

U. S. Will Renew Moscow Inquiry For Mrs. Rubens

Moscow, May 9 (U.P.).—The United States Embassy prepared tonight to renew inquiries regarding the fate or probable trial of Mrs. Ruth Marie Rubens, prisoner of the Soviet government.

Mrs. Rubens and her husband, described here only as Donald D. Robinson, were said to have been arrested on counter-revolutionary charges.

New York, May 9 (AP).—A Federal judge today dismissed writs of habeas corpus obtained in behalf of Johanna Hofmann, 26, and former U. S. Army Sergt. Guentyer Rumrich, 32, who were held under $25,000 bail each in February as suspects in an international spy ring.

George C. Dix, attorney for the woman, said he thought "my client is being held in connection with the investigation of the so-called Reubens-Robinson case instead of any spy investigation."

Minton said SEC officials indicated they wished to investigate whether such issuance complied with SEC regulations.

The lobby committee, Minton said, will continue its investigation of the magazine, edited by Dr. Glenn Frank, chairman of the Republican Party policy committee.

Senate Approves Foreign Ship Bids

By the Associated Press.

The Senate gave tentative approval yesterday to a proposal to permit building of Government-subsidized merchant marine ships in foreign shipyards if their bids were 50 per cent below those of domestic yards.

Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, objected to a proposed amendment to permit first lien loans to ship lines by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

He argued this would permit a ship line to get the limit of construction loans under the present subsidy act and then borrow additional RFC funds.

Ashurst Warns 'Snow Will Fly' Before 'Long-Short-Haul' Repeal Passes.

Senator Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, without using the word filibuster, yesterday warned the Senate that "snow will be flying long, long before the bill to repeal the long-and-short haul clause of the Interstate Commerce act" can be passed.

SEN. ASHURST.

He was referring to the Pettengill bill, passed by the House and approved by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, which would end the prohibition against railroads charging a lower freight rate for a long haul than for a short one over the same route in the same direction. Senator Ashurst's State, being inland, would expect to be charged rail rates higher than those, for instance, to the West Coast, should the prohibition be repealed.

The Midwest "shelter belt," in which millions of trees have been planted under the New Deal, was forgotten by both House and Senate in passing the Agriculture Department bill, the Associated Press pointed out. Revocation of Senate approval of a bill to permit judicial review of findings of the Federal Power Commission was asked by Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, yesterday. The measure approved was designed to overcome Power Commission resistance to a proposed dam in North Carolina but Minton said it would set a precedent which might in time tie the hands of all of the Government's administrative agencies. The Power Commission opposed the legislation on the grounds that the company seeking to build the dam was endeavoring to sue over a mere finding, rather than a formal decision of the commission.

State rivalry in the South over location of one of the four agriculture research laboratories is growing keener. Senators Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, and Connally (Democrat), of Texas, engaged in a debate over location of the cotton laboratory yesterday, Bilbo declaring Mississippi towns had raised $750,000 to contribute to the expense. Connally, seeking the station for Texas, said that after all the advantages had been weighed he had "no fear as to where it will be located.

A great increase in the cost of erecting rural electrification lines if proposed legislation is enacted, was forecast by John M. Carmody, chief of the REA, before a Senate Agriculture subcommittee yesterday. The bill, by Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, would restrain REA from erecting power lines in any manner that would impair the operation of telephone lines. Putting the REA lines underground would increase the cost 150 to 200 per cent, the committee was told by an REA engineer.

Representative Mead (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the House group of the Tennessee Valley Authority joint investigation committee, asked Senator Vic Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio, to call a full meeting of the committee this week to prepare for immediate work. Mead said members of the ten-man House-Senate committee were eager to begin the investigation and that Donahey promised to confer with his four senatorial colleagues on the matter.

Rail Lawyers Criticize RFC Work-Loan Bill

Reorganization Plans Declared Threatened by Pending Measure.

The proposed RFC "work-loan" bill for emergency aid to the railroads was criticized before the House Banking Committee yesterday as holding little hope of assistance to the roads and threatening railroad reorganization plans.

Elihu Root, jr., counsel for one group of security holders of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad, and Marcus Bell, general counsel of the Rock Island, opposed giving the RFC power to sell collateral received for loans to bankrupt roads.

Bill Provides Loans.

They complained the bill would interfere with plans of reorganization now in progress by giving the RFC the privilege of acquiring title to the collateral securing the loans it had previously advanced to carriers now in process of reorganization.

The pending bill amends the RFC act to provide loans to roads for financing of rail, shop appliances, rolling stock and other equipment, and to aid in financing track and equipment maintenance and replacement. The RFC could accept equipment as collateral for loans. A companion bill has been approved by the Senate Banking Committee.

Representative Raymond S. McKeough (Democrat), of Illinois, and some other members of the committee, contended that the RFC as a government agency handling public funds, should be given rights in reorganizations not enjoyed by other creditors.

Rock Island Loan Cited.

McKeough pointed out that the RFC has advanced the Rock Island $13,000,000 secured by collateral having a value at the time of around $40,000,000. He said it was the duty of the committee to protect the public's interest in the money and asked Root:

"If you were a member of the committee and had that duty to perform, how would you vote on the proposal?"

"I would vote against the provision," said Root, "because in my opinion the public interest rests in getting these reorganizations through as quickly as possible. This provision would upset reorganization plans."

Root said his group planned shortly to submit to the Interstate Commerce Commission a plan for reorganization of the Rock Island. He said the pending bill would change the basis on which the plan was drafted, and said it would mean another two years work if the bill becomes law.

RFC Mercy Urged.

He pointed out that the collateral provisions was retroactive, and declared it in conflict with a Supreme Court decision in 1935 holding the courts might enjoin the sale of collateral to permit the drafting of a reorganization plan.

"The retroactive feature is injurious to many roads because it upsets the basis on which reorganization plans are being worked out," Root told the committee.

He said the RFC could afford to be "a little more merciful to the roads" and should wait until satisfactory reorganization plans are worked out.

"When the old equity proceeding for rail reorganizations was discarded by Congress in 1935 and the reorganization procedure set out in section 77 (of the bankruptcy act) was adopted, the theory was established that everything was to be held in status quo while a plan of reorganization was being formed," he said. "That can't be done if someone is allowed to jump in and take out part of the assets. This bill starts the whittling away of the theory of the new bankruptcy act."

Churchill Scores Plans to Return German Colonies

Manchester, England, May 9 (AP).—Winston Churchill, Britain's World War sea lord, tonight condemned any peace pact with Germany which might return Germany's war-lost colonies or result in muzzling the British press.

Churchill's pronouncement came as he launced a country-wide campaign for full support of the League of Nations.

Speaking at a moment when a cabinet re-shuffle is in the air through Colonial Secretary Ormesby-Gore's succession to a peerage and on the eve of a critical air-force debate in Commons Thursday, Churchill left political circles guessing whether he aims to oust the Chamberlain cabinet or find a place in it.

D. C. Man Is Given Year in Tax Fraud

New York, May 9 (AP).—John M. Kelley, 64, vice president of the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey Circus, was sentenced in Federal court today to two years in prison and fined $10,000 on conviction, with two other defendants, of fraudulent income tax returns.

Federal Judge Murray Hulbert released Kelley and the other two defendants on $3,500 bail each pending appeals.

Nathaniel F. Rabner, lately an income tax consultant in Washington, D. C., was sentenced to a year in jail and fined $5,000. Charles D. M. Greer, 64, was sentenced to three months in jail and fined $1,000.

Gas Co. Plans To Sell 15,600 Shares of Stock

Utilities Body Asked Permit for Offering to Cover Its Extensions.

The Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday asked the Public Utilities Commission for permission to issue and sell 15,600 shares of cumulative convertible preferred stock to pay annual dividends of $4.50 a share.

Proceeds would cover expenditures for acquisition and construction of property, additions, extensions and improvements made prior to December 31, 1937.

The company said the stock would be sold to the public through a local dealer or group of dealers. Price at which it would be sold is not stated in the application, but will be given to the commission in an amendment to the present application.

The stock proposed to be issued would be identical as to rights and privileges with preferred stock which was sold to the public last June, the application says, declaring it would be entitled to annual didivends of $4.50 per share, payable quarterly, and each share of the preferred stock could be converted into three shares of the company's common stock.

In addition, the application also asked for authority to issue such shares of common stock as may be required from time to time for conversion of the preferred stock.

F.C.C. Receives Court Setback In Radio Case

The Federal Communications Commission received a major setback yesterday in the form of an opinion by the United States Court of Appeals, which instructed the commission to consider factors that were rejected in a hearing on an application to establish a radio broadcasting company in Pennsylvania.

The Pottsville Broadcasting Co. was denied its application to establish a station in Pottsville, Pa., though an examiner had approved it.

According to the opinion, the commission rejected the application on the grounds that Charles B. Drayton, local attorney and a majority stockholder, was not a resident of the Pottsville District and did not know the needs of the area, and, secondly, that Drayton testified that subscription for the stock of the corporation was contingent upon approval of the Pennsylvania Securities Commission.

The Appellate Court said that the corporation was chartered in Maryland and did not need Pennsylvania approval and secondly that in the past the FCC had not laid down a hard-and-fast rule as to the rights of nonresidents who sought radio rights.

English Mission Seeking Airplanes Plans Work Here

Four members of the British air mission, now investigating the possibility of buying military planes in this country, came here yesterday to formulate plans for their coming trip to Canada and to catch up on their office work. The group's chief, James George Weir, arrived Sunday.

A proposal to build factories in the Dominion to produce planes of American design is being considered, and will undoubtedly influence the activities of the mission when it leaves for Canada at the end of the week, it was said.

Barton Asserts Insurance Help Equals U.S. Aid

Roper Lauds Industry as 'Feeder to Channels' of U. S. Trade.

Life insurance companies of the United States paid out 93 cents to policyholders and beneficiaries for every dollar paid out by Federal relief agencies in the years 1933 to 1937, Representative Bruce Barton, of New York, declared last night.

"Americans, who constitute only 7 per cent of the world's population, are the owners of 70 per cent of the world's life insurance," the Representative said in a radio broadcast sponsored by the National Committee for Life Insurance Education, which is being nationally observed this week.

"You don't have to die to win," Barton declared, "as is demonstrated by the fact that of the $2,450,000,000 paid out to policyholders in 1937, more than 60 per cent, or $1,450,000,000, was paid to living policyholders."

In an address earlier in the day, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper lauded the life insurance industry as a "feeder to the channels of trade to the extent of billions of dollars annually . . . and goes a long way toward the maintenance of the high standard of living of our people."

Joseph C. Behan, vice president of the national committee, also spoke on the program. Others present included Dr. Alexander V. Dye, Paul H. Primm, president of the District Life Underwriters Association; Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director of the Pan American Union, and Bolitha Laws, president of the District Bar Association.

Cabbage and Potatoes Given Cleveland Needy in Crisis

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 9.—Solemn-faced women and children piled Government rations of cabbage and potatoes into baby carriages and toy wagons to replenish their bare cupboards today as city officials grappled with the food crisis among Cleveland's 87,000 direct relief recipients.

Long lines formed at five Federal surplus commodities distributing stations. The vegetables and butter issued there comprised the only food for many families.

To meet the emergency, city council tonight voted to transfer $70,000 from a city fund used to finance its share of WPA project costs.

A special relief session of the Ohio Legislature meets next week to discuss appropriating State moneys in the crisis.

Frank E. Bubna, city relief commissioner, who estimates between one-third and one-fourth of Greater Cleveland's 1,200,000 persons are dependent on either direct relief or WPA work, said the load is larger today than in the 1932 depression.

Gov. Martin L. Davey, at odds with Mayor Burton over relief, has said this county should collect "over 90 million dollars" of delinquent taxes to meet its relief problems. City officials replied only $7,000,000 was delinquent in the city.

"We've used our entire quota and I'm afraid there's going to be trouble," said Mrs. Ester Waterbury, supervisor of an East Side relief station.

The secretary said 7,000 Chinese who have overstayed time limits in their landing permits will be rounded up.

Rising Mississippi Perils Minn. Towns

Minneapolis, Minn., May 9 (AP).—Lowland residents near Aitkin, Minn., fled tonight before the rising Mississippi River as National Guardsmen evacuated at least four farm families near here and Federal flood warnings were posted for points downstream from Aitkin.

More than 800 WPA workers bolstered weakened bridges and piled sandbags along threatened dikes.

Hirota Asserts Japanese Fear U.S. Aggression

Praises America's 'Fair and Impartial' Attitude Since Outbreak of War.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, May 9.—Foreign Minister Koki Hirota disavowed today any Japanese intention of adopting an aggressive policy toward the United States.

The concern of many Japanese, on the contrary, he declared, was with the possibility of the United States adopting "such an attitude as would adversely affect the natural development of Japan's policy in this part of the world."

Speaking in an interview the foreign minister:

Declared "nonaggression is a desirable condition to exist between nations," in commenting on rumors Japan was preparing to discuss a nonaggression treaty with the United States.

Praised the "fair and impartial attitude" of the United States since the outbreak of the Chinese-Japanese war.

Fair Attitude Praised.

Favorable Japanese sentiment toward the United States, he said, "really is the result of the fair and impartial attitude the United States has maintained since the outbreak of the Chinese affair.

"We can fully appreciate how difficult it is to pursue steadily a well-balanced policy toward any complicated international conflict in which both protagonists are on friendly terms with that country (the United States.)

"America has succeeded admirably in adopting and practicing such a policy and I firmly believe she will continue to maintain it."

Commenting on rumors of a possible move for a Japanese-American treaty, he said:

U. S. Policy Feared.

"No one in Japan entertains any idea regarding the possibility of Japan's adopting an aggressive attitude toward the United States.

"Contrarily, not a few Japanese are apprehensive regarding chances the United States might some day adopt such an attitude as would adversely affect the natural development of Japan's policy in this part of the world.

"So, from Japan's standpoint, it is earnestly to be hoped that all cause for such fears and anxieties will be eliminated by the United States.

"I do not believe it will be difficult if the American people understand Japan's peaceful intentions in her relations not only with the United States but with all nations.

Nonagression Pact Sought.

"In these circumstances the question is whether the United States Government has the intention to conclude a nonaggression pact with Japan."

He said he believed the "overwhelming majority" of Americans were friendly to Japan and added, "it is my confident hope that even those who are critical will, in due course, come to evaluate Japan's policy and action in their proper perspective."

Commenting on the Philippines, he said:

"Whether the commonwealth delays independence from the United States is a question solely to be settled between the commonwealth and the United States and Japan considers herself in no position to meddle in the matter."

1,000,000 Casualties.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), May 10.—After 307 days of bitter warfare at an estimated cost of more than 1,000,000 casualties, about 1,000,000 Chinese and Japanese soldiers fought today for control of China's vast interior.

The struggle centered on the Central Chinese front, where domination of the Lunghai Railway, running more than 600 miles west into the heart of China, and 150 unconquered miles of the intersecting Tientsin-Pukow Railway were the principal Japanese objectives.

Three Japanese columns were thrusting northward against the Lunghai—two across country and the center column along the Tientsin-Pukow line—in a desperate effort to circumvent the costly deadlock along the central front from Shantung Province, on the north.

The right wing force had driven within 60 miles of the eastern end of the Lunghai in northern Kiangsu Province, near Fowning. It was the nearest of the three southern spearheads of the railway.

The battle on the north side of the railway "backbone" of Chinese resistance yesterday saw Japanese airmen desperately trying to blast a hole in the defenses about 35 miles east of Suchow, junction of the Lunghai and the Tientsin-Pukow railroads.

Chinese artillery positions there, less than 10 miles from the Lunghai, were heavily bombed, indicating that was the point of the fiercest fighting—almost the same battle zone in which the previous major offensive of the Japanese was rolled back in disastrous defeat a month ago.

10,000 Children Sing Farewell As Duce Sees Hitler to Train

Great Fireworks Display Staged at Florence After Feuhrer Views Art Treasures; Nazi, Surprised, Shows Boyish Appreciation.

By the Associated Press.

Florence, Italy, May 9.—Adolf Hitler tonight headed across the Alps toward Germany, ending a dramatic six-day visit with his close collaborator, Mussolini.

Hitler's train pulled out of Florence just at midnight for Brenner Pass, the Alpine gateway to Italy which he pledged his nation forever would consider inviolate.

Mussolini told Hitler good-by with a surprise spectacle which rivaled all the other grandiose events of his stay in Italy.

As the Fascist and Nazi dictators reached the railway station a barrage of fireworks burst from the station roof, illuminating the sky for miles around.

Children Sing Farewell.

A chorus of 10,000 children, uniformed and lined up row on row against the nearby fountains, sang a farewell to Hitler. Colored floodlights played on the square, bands played and thousands of troops formed a final honor guard for the departing guest.

Hitler wore an expression of boyish pleasure and bewilderment when the fireworks shot up and the singing began.

The program in Florence in his honor was a crowded one. The last event was a special opera performance at which he arrived half an hour late and left after the first act.

Civilians Mobilized.

The first civil mobilization in Italy since the Ethiopian war of 1935-36 was decreed in the city, so all Florentines could welcome the Nazi leader.

Mussolini, who was at the station in Rome when King Vittorio Emanuele and Hitler exchanged farewells, had dashed to Florence to receive the Fuehrer on his arrival.

Together they drove through historic streets, lined with cheering Italians, to see the city's prized art.

Florence gave Hitler the warmest reception since his arrival in Italy and provided decorations which rivaled those of Rome and Naples in beauty and originality.

Sees Famous Paintings.

Mussolini escorted the Fuehrer through palaces and galleries, showing him the prized paintings and sculptures.

Most picturesque part of the day's festivities was an exhibition of Tuscan pageants in the sixteenth century Boboli garden.

There, in a great amphitheater along a cypress avenue and in adjacent parts of the garden, players performed in medieval costumes.

The exhibition included a "calcio," historic football game of Florence; the famous "palio," or horse race of Siena; the battle of the bridge of Pisa, and the joust of the Saracens of Arezzo.

A mass meeting in Florence's great square, the Signoria, where Savanarola was burned and other historic events occurred, took place in the evening.

Loyalists Led By Canadians Capture Hills

Army Cuts Deep Behind Franco's Spearhead; Moors Beaten Off.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, France, May 9.—Loyalists led by the reorganized remnants of two Canadian brigades cut deep behind the insurgents' Mediterranean spearhead today and seized positions dominating the highway terminus of Cuevas de Vinroma, government dispatches reported.

The surprise thrust, denied in insurgent dispatches, was said to have carried the loyalists nearly 20 miles to the rear of Gen. Franco's vanguard now on the outskirts of Torreblanca, 23 miles north of Castellon de la Plana on the coast.

The loyalists, counterattacking against positions taken from them along the important highway inland from Alcala de Chivert to Cuevas de Vinroma, threw their strength against the sector on the northern outskirts of Cuevas under cover of driving rain.

Artillery, mortars and heavy tanks joined in the attack on insurgents entrenched in hills above the town.

The government troops, splitting into three columns, charged up the slopes in groups of ten to escape annihilation by enemy machine-gun fire.

The loyalists completely encircled the hills, frontier dispatches said, and reached the summits after suffering enormous casualties.

The government troops hastily fortified the shattered positions in anticipation of an insurgent counter-attack, which failed to develop.

Simultaneously, the government war office at Barcelona reported loyalist divisions farther inland in the Teruel-Morella zone had beaten off a stiff attack north and northwest of Morella. The battle was a costly one for the loyalists who were said to have repulsed four separate attacks by African Moors.

Insurgent dispatches said the loyalists, driven from positions along the Alcala de Chivert-Cuevas de Vinroma highway, were retreating southward along the inland highway to Torreblanca where Gen. Miaja will muster the pick of his loyalist troops for a defense of Castellon and Valencia.

Hapsburg Archduke Marries School Teacher, Loses Rank

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, May 9.—Archduke Albrecht married a commoner today and lost his place in the ancient House of Hapsburg.

Expulsion of the Archduke from the family dominant in Europe for 700 years was announced shortly after he took for his bride Katherine Bucskay, 27, school teacher and daughter of a small-town mechanic.

Count Josef Hunyadi, representative in Hungary of Archduke Otto, head of the House of Hausburg and pretender to the nonexistent throne of Austria, explained "King and Emperor Otto" several years ago issued a circular letter to all members of the Hapsburg family reminding them if they should marry beneath their rank they automatically would cease to be members of the imperial house.

Albrecht, who looks younger than his 40 years and himself a one-time candidate for the throne of Hungary, was married once before, in 1930, to Mme. Irene de Rudnay, divorced wife of a Hungarian diplomat.

But that marriage, which ended in divorce, took place before Otto issued his warning letter. Moreover, it was a civil ceremony and therefore unrecognized as valid under the Hapsburg family law.

'Alien' Threats Concern U. S., Roosevelt Says

B'nai

of elementary human rights." He said:

"We are witnessing today a recrudescence of hatred and brutality of man to man; millions of people uprooted from the lands of their ancestors and forced to flee they know not where; the intellectuals and geniuses of nations driven to flight or self-destruction and the persecutors enthroned in their high places."

Spain, he declared, "is in the throes of a devastating internicene struggle between democracy and dictatorship. Austria, for some years a free republic, has recently been absorbed by the imperial power of Adolf Hitler. It must also be conceded that the remaining democratic states are seriously menaced and will not save themselves through smug undifference to the peril of the dictatorships."

He pointed out that "in none of the totalitarian states of today did constitutional freedom ever really take root; they have merely turned from one form of dictatorship to another."

Faith in Democracy.

Bankhead emphasized his belief that "while the position of the dictatorships may become increasingly precarious, the traditionally democratic nations will weather the storm.

"In spite of the present crises, there has been no surrender of constitutional government where it has existed for as much as four generations. The peoples of the free nations, with their deeply settled convictions of personal liberty, will not readily succumb to any form of tyranny."

He attributed the enduring quality of the United States Government to the Bill of Rights and to provisions of the Constitution giving the people themselves the control of the country. "Under our judicial system such principle of government is given adequate security and protection against any temporary clamor or protest," he added.

Bankhead paid tribute to the part played by Jews in supporting the American Government since the days of the Revolution. Reminding his hearer that "the Jew is the first to feel the mailed fist of arbitrary power," he urged them to continue "in the vanguard of those who battle to uphold the democratic principle."

President's Remarks.

In his message, addressed to Alfred M. Cohen, head of B'nai B'rith, the President said in full:

"It gives me great pleasure to extend greetings to the members of B'nai B'rith on the occasion of the triennial conventoin of the organization.

"For almost a century B'nai B'rith has effectively served the well-being of American Jewry and the Nation. Its philanthropic achievements are permanently enshrined within the walls of hospitals, orphanages and homes for the aged which bless humanity in every section of our land. Its endeavors in the realm of education exhibit a far-sighted understanding in the problems of the younger generation. No less important is B'nai B'rith's program of Americanism which fortifies the effort to keep America safe for democracy, while its program of good will strives toward harmony among the competent elements comprising our American society.

"In the conflict of policies and political principles which the world witnesses today this Nation remains unshaken in its devotion to the ideals and the institutions of democracy. Except insofar as we deplore ill treatment of human beings anywhere, the domestic policies of other nations are of no concern to the United States. When, however, alien influences seek to undermine the foundations of our own institutions we become definitely concerned.

"This country, for its own guidance and for the guidance of other nations if they will follow it, has ever held aloft the torch of freedom. Our conception of freedom embraces complete liberty of conscience and of thought, freedom of education, freedom of the press, the right of free speech and of assembly. On that conception of liberty all of our happiness as a Nation has been built."

The program was broadcast over Station WOL, a coast-to-coast network of the Mutual Broadcasting System and an international hookup. The speakers were introduced by President Cohen, who retires this year after 13 years of service. The banquet was arranged as a testimonial to Cohen.

Anti-Defamation Report.

A highlight of yesterday's business session was the report of the organization's Anti-Defamation League, read by Chairman Sigmund Livingston, of Chicago. For the first time in its 25 years of investigation, the league focused its attention in this report on the charge that many Jews are Communists.

Listing nine American Communist leaders, Livingston pointed out that not one is a Jew. As for David Dubinsky and Sidney Hillman, "we can state authoritively that they are not Communists." Of the 13 men who make up the Russian "Politbureau," the supreme directing body of the U. S. S. R., only one is a Jew, he declared.

Livingston quoted figures to show that the Jews opposed rather than aided the Russian Revolution and that Jewish Communists made up a negligible minority in Germany at the time of Hitler's rise to power.

The league has traced much anti-Jewish propaganda found in this country to Germany, according to the report. In an attack on the system of "exchange students," it declares that German students are sent over here solely to propagandize and that American students in Germany are the targets of an intense pro-Nazi propaganda campaign.

Col. I. J. Phillipson, regimental commander, said the case was "entirely a local matter," and there was no suspicion of espionage.

House Action Due Today on Tax Bill Report

Senate Completes Work on Compromise Measure in Eight Minutes.

The conference report on the Administration's 1938 "business recovery" revenue bill snapped through the Senate yesterday in eight minutes and headed for final approval in the House tomorrow.

Compromising House and Senate differences on undivided profits and capital gains levies, the measure retains a fragment of the profits tax principle. Earnings of corporations retaining all profits would be taxed 19 per cent, while those of companies paying all out in dividends would be assessed only 16⅔ per cent.

Flat Tax Imposed.

The measure marked a surrender by the Senate in its stand for an 18 per cent flat tax on corporations. But Senate provisions were largely retained on capital gains features. flat tax of 20 per cent would be imposed from assets held between 18 months and 2 years, while gains from property held over 2 years would be taxed only 15 per cent.

Designed to aid business by removing burdensome provisions in the present law and aiding the movement of frozen credit, the compromise encountered virtually no opposition in the Senate.

Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, called up the report, and volunteered to answer questions. When none were asked, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, read a statement jointly prepared by himself and Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, for the Finance Committee minority.

George Sees Co-operation.

Vandenberg said both he and Capper preferred complete repeal of the undivided profits tax but "the parliamentary choice of the moment is the lesser of two evils."

"Then you signed the report of your own free will and accord," asked Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas.

"Yes," said Vandenberg, "we signed it of our own free will and accord under the circumstances."

House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn later said the report probably will be called up for final House action tomorrow.

Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), of Georgia, a member of the Finance Committee, commented off the floor that the tax bill is "tangible evidence of co-operation with business.'

"Recovery is the great issue in the country," said George, "and Congress is making it possible, certainly in the revenue act of 1938, for business to co-operate fully and wholeheartedly with the efforts now being made by the Government to restore normal conditions and to relieve unemployment."

among other things, how to accept a gift graciously, how to make a speech of welcome, respond to a toast or offer words of greeting or eulogy. If a lady knows beforehand she will speak, she is strongly advised to have a "facial" and her hair fixed since this is vital to her self confidence and is told it will bolster her "poise."

The main reason the classes are held in secrecy is that many members' wives feel that if word got around they were brushing up on their public speaking technique, they would be literally "swamped" with requests.

One pupil declares she has found the work such that "the dumbest one among us finds herself on her feet making a creditable showing." Another admits it "gives one a wholesome poise, confidence in one's ability to do, an awakened memory and an earnest desire really to wake up and live."

Another experience, was that of the wife of a prominent member of the House who was sitting in the gallery at the opening of the session. An announcer for a radio hook-up was wandering about getting comment.

Suddenly the pupil found the "mike" thrust in her face, the announcer calling her by name and asking what she thought the President and Congress would do during the coming session.

Fortunately she had studied about what to do for just such an occasion. She called it into action, and launched into a witty give-and-take with the announcer that brought her complimentary letters from all parts of the country.

Bill Would Give Widow Of F.B.I. Agent $5,000

Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, yesterday introduced a bill to grant $5,000 to Mrs. Mabel Foote Ramsey, widow of William R. Ramsey, jr., who was killed May 3 in a gun battle with Joseph Earlywine, bank robber, near Danville, Ill. Ramsey, a F. B. I. agent, was the father of a small child.

rigid work-week and pay-rate schedules set in the drastic House measure.

Senate Bill Flexible.

The Senate bill permits differentials, being devised to allow flexible wages-and-hours provisions to apply according to the standards set in the industries and localities under consideration. The House bill, beginning with a 25-cents-per-hour minimum wage and a 44-hour workweek, steps up and down, respectively, to a flat 40-cents-an-hour wage and a 40-hour week, without allowing differentials in areas where living costs (and wages) are low.

The Mapes-McLean announcements were made possible by the introduction by Chairman John O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, of the Rules Committee, of a resolution which would waive the rules of the House and allow the Speaker to recognize a member for the purpose of bringing up the wage-hour bill at any time.

Under the rules, the bill could not have been brought up before May 23, as bills chiseled out of the Rules Committee's pigeonholes by the petition method can only be brought up on the second and fourth Mondays of each month. May 23 was the first possible "discharge day."

O'Connor told The Post it was very possible that his resolution would be considered by the Rules group at its meeting today, among other matters. While he had anticipated the Mapes announcement, he was surprised to learn of McLean's subsequent switch.

Mapes said:

"The people want the Congress to adjourn. The House has clearly indicated that it wants to vote on the bill. There is nothing to be gained by delaying the vote. If advancing the vote will hasten adjournment I am for it."

McLean said: "The business men of the country desire an early adjournment of Congress. If an early adjournment can be brought about by expediting consideration of the wage-hour bill, the price might not be too much to pay."

But the five conservative Southern Democrats and the one Southern Republican on the Rules Committee, Representative J. Will Taylor, of Tennessee, remained adamant in their stand against permitting the House to vote on the legislation. None of them yesterday give any indication of a change of viewpoint as a result of the speed with which the petition was signed up, or as a result of the speed with which the petition was signed up, or as a result of O'Connor's newest move and the consequent Mapes-McLean statements. It was believed all would maintain their positions against wage-hour legislation of any sort.

As the bill continued to march onward, American Federation of Labor officials announced that unemployment in the country had increased to the 1935 level, approximately.

The March figures for the last four years, as released by the federation's estimators yesterday stood at: 1935, 11,233,000; 1936, 10,482,000; 1937, 8,604,000; 1938, 11,232,000. The March, 1933, figure, described as "only a rough estimate," was 15,100,000.

farmers, as the Senate voted $25,000,000 on loans to tenant farmers who seek ownership of their farms, while the House asked only $15,000,000 in that connection. The Senate also upped a $2,500,000 House appropriation for purchase and retirement of poor farming lands to $15,000,000.

At the Agriculture Department Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace announced the official results of the burley tobacco marketing quota referendum held April 9 as 154,208 growers for the quota. This represented 87.1 per cent in favor of it, constituting more than the two-thirds required by law.

As a result the burley tobacco marketing quota of 350,000,000 pounds, proclaimed by the Secretary March 29, will take effect in the next marketing year, beginning October 1. A total of 177,078 growers out of 260,000 eligibles cast votes in the referendum.

Flies Like Gnats Harass Motorists Along Boulevard

Thick swarms of gnat-like flies last night annoyed motorists along the Mount Vernon boulevard between Washington and Alexandria. Several drivers reported the insects were blown into their eyes.

S. A. Rohwer, an assistant chief of the Bureau of Entomology of the Department of Agriculture, said the swarms frequently occur at this time of the year in the late afternoon and evening. He said they breed on decaying vegetation and will remain as long as they find the temperature suitable.

Bob La Follette Hits 'Reactionary' Old Line Parties

By the United Press.

Senator Robert M. La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, charged in a radio speech last night that "reactionaries" have broken down usefulness of the Democratic and Republican parties and appealed for united support for his brother's party, the newly launched National Progressives of America.

La Follette said the new party is not aimed at breeding discontent but is designed to unite forces "without expectation of rewards of pap and patronage" and in the interest of combatting the "tyranny of communism and fascism, with confidence that a full and abundant life for the people can be obtained."

The party was formed 10 days ago under the leadership of Gov. Philip La Follette of Wisconsin and is intended to embrace liberal elements dissatisfied with policies of the old line parties.

Ford Co. Blocks Labor Board's Court Retreat

trary is shown," it would "vacate and set aside its findings and order for the purpose of further proceedings before the board."

Steel Case Postponed.

In Philadelphia the Appeals Court postponed, pending further hearings Friday, a decision on the NLRB's plea for dismissal of an order that prevented reopening of the board's case against the Republic Steel Corporation.

The order directed reinstatement of 5,000 workers who struck last July in Ohio.

Attorneys for Republic told the Philadelphia court that the NLRB sought to "doctor up" the record of its case in accord with the recent Supreme Court decision in the Morgan stockyards case.

In that ruling, the Court held an order by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace was invalid because the respondent had not been given opportunity to fully present its case.

The Labor Board in Washington moved to vacate another of its orders against the H. J. Heinz Co., of Pittsburgh. A board spokesman said the company was notified that "unless some cause to the contrary shall appear," the board will vacate next Friday an order finding that Heinz had violated the Wagner act and directing the management to bargain with the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butchers Workmen, an A. F. of L. affiliate. Such action would reopen the case for further board proceedings.

Union Switch Upheld.

The National Labor Relations Board last night issued "proposed findings of fact" against the Smith Wood Products, Inc., Coquille, Oreg., and once again upheld the right of workers to shift from the American Federation of Labor to the Committee for Industrial Organization during the life of a contract.

Instituting a new procedure made necessary by the Supreme Court decision in the Kansas City stockyards rate case, the board's "proposed findings of fact" are intended to give employers the right to file exceptions, present oral arguments or file briefs before the board issues its decisions.

Ford Plant Blast Kills 1, Injures 16

Detroit, May 9 (AP).—An explosion of a chemical tank in the glass-making shops of the Ford Motor Co.'s River Rouge plant today killed one man and injured 16 others.

The dead man, Edward Wasilewski, 56, a Ford employe for 18 years, was killed when the tank, about 6 feet in diameter and 15 feet high, was upset in the process of laminating safety glass. The force of the blast blew a large hole in the roof of the building. Five of the injured were hurt seriously.

$5,100,000 D.C. Tax Bill Sent To White House

District

50-cents-a-barrel beer levy, $200,000.

Other provisions include repeal of the inoperative 60-40 law; a change in the auto license renewal date to March 1; establishment of a one-man board of tax appeals, and a bar to diversion of highway funds for street lighting.

Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, led the successful fight against Palmisano and a handful of representatives from States whose farmers bring produce into Washington.

While admitting that the business privilege tax is not ideal, he reminded the House that it had rejected the income levy produced by his sub-committee. He said he favors a broad tax base and suggested that a proper revenue bill should include a low income tax, a small sales tax and the realty levy.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, ranking minority member of the sub-committee, warned that if the tax report were rejected the Commissioners would be forced to boost the realty rate high enough to raise the entire $5,000,000.

"And that would penalize the little home owner," he said.

Dirksen and Representative Tarver (Democrat), of Georgia, became embroiled in an exchange of personalities when Tarver assailed the business privilege tax as unconstitutional and unfair to the States.

Palmisano argued that when the House sub-committee held hearings on the original bill no one favored renewal of the business privilege tax. He pointed out, however, that local business men suddenly swung around in favor of it when threatened with an income tax because "the income tax would have cost them more money."

Nichols also led the losing fight for adoption of the taxicab insurance conference report and pleaded with members to consider the safety of their families and themselves.

Opposing him were Representative Dirksen, who suggested that the legislation go over until local insurance laws could be amended, and a half dozen members who professed to speak for labor and the taxi operators.

Nichols charged the Independent Taxi Owners Association with sending out circulars inviting independents to join their association to escape the insurance providing the $75,000 cash deposit provision were retained in the bill.

He predicted that if the bonding authorization were retained, the larger cab associations would squeese out independent taxi operators, who would have to pay $365 a year each for liability insurance.

Reciting some of the profits of the Diamond cab organization from sale of gas, oil, tires and insurance to their members, Nichols said:

"Talk about the rackets in your insurance companies. Why the biggest racket I know of is carried on by one or two cab associations within the District."

Dirksen had previously called attention to the experience of other cities in finding that insurance companies organized to sell policies to taxi companies and then went bankrupt after judgments had accumulated.

Representatives Boileau (Progressive), and O'Malley (Democrat), of Wisconsin, read letters to the House from labor groups expressing preference for the House cash bond provision. Nichols countered, however, with a letter from a rival labor group, purporting to speak for 70 per cent of the drivers, which indorsed the Senate bill.

Woman Claims Credit.

Responsibility for virtual defeat of the taxi liability bill was claimed last night by Mrs. Lillian Botkin, of 1445 N street northwest, one of Washington's dozen women cab drivers.

"I told my sob story to dozens of Congressmen," said Mrs. Botkins, "and now I'm so happy I'm going to take the rest of the day off. I would have had to stop driving if the bill had gone through, because my cab is 5 years old and the insurance company wouldn't have taken it. I couldn't pay the insurance anyway."

Move to Lift Spanish Arms Embargo Lost

before the House. I know it would meet with stubborn opposition."

McReynolds told reporters that a month ago he had told his committee he intended to hold no hearings on proposals to lift the munitions embargo on Spain. He said he asked his committee if it would back him in this intention and that, with 20 members present, all raised their hands in support.

Senator Pittman, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, last week announced he had submitted the Nye resolution to the State Department for its observations and recommendations, if it cared to make any. He indicated that if the department was not favorable to passage of the measure it would be pigeon-holed by the committees.

State Officials Irked.

Yesterday it was understood that Secretary Hull was continuing work on his reply to Pittman, a reply in which he is expected to make no recommendation for adoption of the resolution by Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota.

On the other hand, it was expected that the Secretary would outline the policy of strict neutrality the department has maintained throughout the Spanish war. Some State Department officials already have indicated it is the impression there that no developments have occurred that would warrant abandonment of the policy.

There have been plain indications of resentment at the State Department of methods pursued by some of the "pressure groups" seeking to aid the Spanish loyalists, or, as they represent their aim, trying to counteract the assistance being received by the insurgents from Germany and Italy.

Wamplers Freed On Bail in Killing; Writer Still in Jail

Special Dispatch to The Post.

La Plata, Md., May 9.—T. Morris Wampler, former Washington lawyer, and his wife were released on bond today pending jury action on charges they helped to murder Charles Adams, 65-year-old handyman on their Fenwick estate.

Judge Walter Mitchell, of Charles County Circuit Court, set Wampler's bond at $3,000 and his wife's at $1,000. The couple returned home after having been in jail here since last Tuesday.

Sheriff Russell Howard said no bond was set for Alan Buck, 26, author of children's stories, accused jointly with the Wamplers. Buck indicated, said the sheriff, that he preferred to remain in jail.

Judge Mitchell granted the bonds after a hearing on a habeas corpus writ filed by Joseph Turco, Washington attorney, and John Mudd, local lawyer.

"TODAY I'm Going to FLY!"

"I'm going to Chicago on an AMERICAN FLAGSHIP!"

Here's the way it happened... I've always dreaded the long, tedious trip to Chicago ::: Sure, I know planes make the trip in only four hours and forty-five minutes, but I never associated flying with my own travel needs.

Then George Sheridan got hold of me. "Look," he said, "I've flown to Chicago a dozen times. I'm keen about flying and so is my wife. She says now that it's the only way to travel!"

He went on to tell me about American having the only through service to Chicago with no change of planes—and their great Flagships that are nature-cooled in flight. Here's the way George put it, "A dandy dinner aloft, a chat or a good book, perhaps a snooze and the stewardess saying, 'Wake up—here's Chicago!'"

It sounded pretty good. So I called American Airlines and made my reservation on The PRESIDENT, leaving at 4:35 pm. I was surprised at the low fare—$36.00—and the saving of 10% on round trip tickets. And on my return I'll stop over at Cincinnati without extra cost.

Byrd Ridicules Minton Bill at AP Gathering

Glass Given Ovation by 50 Md. and Va. Editors at Session Here.

The Minton bill to penalize the press for alleged misstatements of fact, was ridiculed by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, at a meeting here last night of Associated Press editors from Maryland and Virginia.

"Speaking as a member of the newspaper fraternity, I don't believe that anyone outside of Senator Minton will vote for the bill," Senator Byrd declared. The bill, as proposed by Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, would impose a $10,000 fine and two years in jail for knowing misstatement of fact in a newspaper.

"To begin with, what reporter ever had $10,000?" Senator Byrd laughed. He was one of three speakers at a banquet given the editors by the Washington Star. In the afternoon the visitors, numbering about 50 were entertained at the residence of Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Post, and were his guests at a baseball game.

Glass Given Ovation.

Senator Carter Glass received an ovation on his appearance at the banquet. He spoke briefly, but there flashed the crisp line that "No man who is ever elected unanimously in Virginia will ever be worth a damn."

He with Byrd and Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, praised the Associated Press for its traditional impartial treatment of the news report. "The time has come," O'Mahoney declared, "to take the blinkers off and face the facts as they are and to report the facts as they are, as, of course, the Associated Press always does." His remarks, made off the record mostly, involved politics and the structure of American life as it has shifted from a rural environment to urban complications.

"We have invented ourselves into our present economic situation and it is up to us to think our way out," he said. Two points raised his optimism, he said. One of these was the defeat of the Supreme Court proposal of the President, the other the defeat of the reorganization bill.

"Impulse" Important.

"The important thing was the impulse on the part of the people to keep free and the aim of American editors should be to the end of making this new mechanical civilization respond to democratic principles," he asserted.

The editors, who met yesterday at the Raleigh Hotel, will resume discussions at 11 o'clock this morning. Attending are: W. C. Stouffer, the Roanoke World-News; Frank H. Fuller, A. Crab Pickers' Strike Is Settled At Cambridge

Packers Agree to Return to Old Scale, Recognize C. I. O. Union.

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Md., May 9. — The strike of crab-meat pickers ended late today following a conference of packers and a C. I. O. organizer in the home of State Labor Commissioner A. Stengle Marine.

The strike began seven weeks ago when packers ordered a cut from 35 cents to 25 cents a gallon of the picked crab meat.

Marine said the packers agreed to return to the former price and also to recognize the C. I. O. United Cannery, Agricultural Packing and Allied Workers as the bargaining agent for the employes.

The seven plants which remained closed after the crab fishing season began May 1 will open Wednesday, Marine said.

Present at the conference was Michael Howard, the C. I. O. organizer whose automobile was burned by a mob, and eight representatives for the packers.

"The feeling is very good between the two groups now," Marine asserted.

Union organization of the 300 strikers, of whom the majority were colored women, began more than a week after the walkout. Packers refused to deal with union representatives and two C. I. O. organizers were escorted outside the city limits by motorcades.

ICC Will Refuse Bus-Fare Raises In 2 Va. Counties

Applications of two Virginia motor coach lines, carrying Washington commuters from points in Arlington and Fairfax Counties, for a 5 cent increase in fare will be denied by the Interstate Commerce Commission, The Post learned authoritatively last night from sources close to the two firms.

The companies, the Arlington and Fairfax Motor Railway and the Washington, Virginia and Maryland Coach Co., applied for an increase from 10 to 15 cents to be effective this week. The commission has not announced its action on the application.

The move to raise fares brought a storm of protest from residents of both counties in which live thousands who depend on the lines to carry them to and from work in Washington.

Third of College Students Held Tuberculous

Unbelievably High Incidence of Disease Found in Health Study.

"An unbelievably high incidence of disease and physical or mental handicaps" among the Nation's 1,000,000 college students is analyzed in a report to be placed today before an executive session of the American Youth Commission, meeting at the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

Tuberculosis Common.

More than one-third of the students entering 56 colleges and universities which make tests for tuberculosis were found to be infected to some degree by this disease. One student in every 200 proved to be suffering from a fully developed tubercular lesion.

In spite of this apparent prevalence of tuberculosis, the report states, only 101 of the colleges surveyed have facilities for making the necessary tests, while only 56 administer them as a matter of routine for entering students.

Although 11 per cent of students matriculating at 29 specified colleges in 1935-36 revealed uncorrected visual errors nearly half the total number of colleges reporting make no visual examination.

Young to Preside.

Authors of the survey recommend a complete college health program consisting of four services—a student health service for individuals, a campus public health service for the student body, classroom instruction in health matters and physical education as a health activity and for correction of deficiencies.

Owen D. Young will preside over today's session of the Youth Commission. Besides receiving the college health report, the commission will hear Dr. Floyd W. Reeves, chairman of the President's Advisory Committee on Education, discuss recent findings of that group.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Howard University School of Music presents Marian Anderson in a song recital Monday night in the Rialto Theater; Kosti Vehanen, accompanist. Program: "Tutta raccolta" and "Der Floete weich Gefuehl" (Handel), "A bruno vestiti" (Carissimi), "Die Vogel" and "Ave Maria" (Schubert), "Der Nussbaum" (Schumann), "Gesang Weylas" (Wolf), "Casta diva" (Bellini), "Sometime" (Eossotto), "Eros" (Cohen), "Idle Wishes" (Sibelius), "Finnish Sailor's Song" (Vehanen), Negro Spirituals: "Done Foun' My Los' Sheep," "Honor, Honor," "Were You There," "Der's No Hidin's Place Down Dere."

That kind of promptness which times arrival at the last possible moment defeated its own object last night at Marian Anderson's recital in the Rialto Theater. So many auditors had the same idea that the crush at the doors resulted in a delay of a quarter of an hour in the starting of the program. But the eventual outcome was an auditorium filled as it should have been to welcome so satisfactory a singer, whose visits to Washington are occasions for enjoyment.

Miss Anderson is one of those vocalists endowed with both the instinct and the capability for artistic singing. Her readings have that assurance which springs from an innate feeling for the musical values of a song and from confidence in the instrument. The poise of her phrasing is calculated in every accent, and the flow of her tone controlled in every shade of color, yet this discipline over the medium of expression interferes in no way with her emotional urgency. Each song seems to be the spontaneous voicing of a mood.

It is this identification of the singer and the song that makes her interpretations a delight. One is not consciously aware of the finesse behind the artistry, but only of the musical effect. There is here no parade of technical vocalism, but a sincere effort to disclose the beauty of the song.

One notes with uneasiness that Miss Anderson is continuing to develop the upper tones of her voice, their power and resonance are indubitable, but the gain in volume has been paid for in a change of timbre. The velvety texture of her voice is showing the strain, and an occasional harshness is apparent. This was particularly observable in the dramatic arias by Handel and Bellini, neither of which lie in her natural range.

Her eloquence in lyrics, however, has the olden charm, for there she uses her tones persuasively rather than commandingly. It would seem that the more intimate her relation is with the emotion of a song, the greater is her subtlety. It is in intensity of feeling, rather than in the heroic style, that she conveys her message most surely.

Man Pays Bonus To Persuade U.S. To Take $10,000

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury discovered yesterday a citizen who not only wants to lend money to the Government but is willing to pay the Government to take it.

This man, whose name was not disclosed, offered $10,001 for a $10,000 loan bill, part of the Treasury's weekly $50,000,000 offering. Officials said he probably wanted to get the $10,000 into nontaxable Federal securities. His offer was accepted with alacrity.

Secretary Morgenthau reported that the $50,000,000 issue was taken up at the lowest average interest rate ever attained—0.029 per cent.

Health Economics Debate.

Although little has been heard recently of the contest between the Group Health Association and the District Medical Society, their differences are still far from resolved. Indeed, if in any way changed, relations between the two organizations are worse than they were. The debate has outgrown its local setting and is now viewed as a test case on which the future of medicine for the country as a whole may depend.

Thus, last week, Dr. Hugh Cabot, of the Mayo Clinic, came to Washington to encourage the GHA in its defiance of organized medicine. And in its current issue the Yale Law Journal publishes the suggestion that doctors expelled from medical societies because of group practice may find relief in the courts.

It is scarcely for the lay mind to pass on the merits of this last suggestion. The Court of Appeals here has twice ruled that the directors of non-profit organizations similar to the District Medical Society may expel members at their discretion. Moreover, members of the society have always been required to sign an agreement to abide by its constitution and by-laws or resign.

Against these points, the Yale editors submit that a doctor might argue that expulsion by a medical society is a device by which the costs of health can be kept at levels higher than those available through group practice. If so, it is concluded, expulsion might be construed as a restraint of trade and therefore contrary to public policy.

Whatever the logic in the thought, and however the courts might decide on it, a test would not seem desirable until the offended doctors have exhausted all remedies before the directors of both local and national medical organizations. There is great popular enthusiasm for group health plans, as the expanding membership of GHA testifies. The idea will spread further, with or without organized medical support. And the issues involved can be settled more effectively by amicable than by legal proceedings, even though the latter seem to be drawing closer.

Of course, the Yale proposal considers only one aspect of the law. A case already in the courts here raises the questions of whether a corporation may properly practice medicine and, if so, whether it is liable to the insurance laws. The GHA filed a petition for a declaratory judgment on these points several months ago. Since then, the district attorney has answered with the necessary motion to dismiss the application; but the corporation counsel has yet to appear with his needed companion brief. Meantime, too, the GHA has revised the language of its petition to accord with a recent change in its by-laws. This will probably delay the verdict longer.

However aggravating the long wait, it is preferable to the Congressional investigations proposed for the interval. In an election year particularly, a House committee would be likely to contribute further to the prejudice and misinformation already obscuring the problem.

Already Well Established.

A few days ago the doors of the Museum of Modern Art were closed at the end of a first and eminently successful season of exhibitions. These attracted more than 20,000 visitors, including many from other cities. They have served to stimulate a widespread and lively curiosity regarding the plans for next season, now soon to be announced.

The Museum of Modern Art does not rival but complements the other art museums of Washington. The value of such museums as the Freer, the Corcoran, the Phillips and the National Gallery lies to a large extent in their permanent collections. This value, of course, will increase as the collections are enhanced in both number and quality until, as may one day come to pass, they rival the most famous treasure houses of Old World cities.

The value of the Museum of Modern Art, however, lies in the paradoxical fact that it neither has, nor means to have, any permanent collection. Its purpose, like that of the older institution of the same name in New York, is to provide a center where the best work of recent and contemporary artists may be temporarily assembled from private collections, commercial galleries and museums in other cities.

In this way it will make for a readier and wider public recognition of artistic development and accomplishment in many fields of painting. Still another benefit to both students and public, no doubt, will be to afford hospitality to important traveling collections of modern art, many of which have hitherto been denied a Washington showing because of lack of space in other museums.

The sponsors of the museum have undertaken a service of great cultural benefit to the National Capital, and indirectly to the Nation, and of great encouragement to living artists.

Mr. Hirota Blunders.

If his government were disposed to practice what it preaches there would be more enthusiasm over Foreign Minister Hirota's incontestable observation that "non-aggression is a desirable condition to exist between nations." But as matters stand the pious sentiment arouses only an ironic smile, particularly, one surmises, among Japanese troops now finding the conquest of China a great deal more difficult than they had been led to expect.

The evidence indicates that it is not any Japanese fidelity to the doctrine of non-aggression, but simply the licking Japanese troops have been taking in Shantung, which now leads Mr. Hirota to suggest a pact of non-aggression between his country and the United States. Faced with a major war of its own creation the Tokyo government is naturally seeking to bolster its overtaxed strength by any kind of treaty which might impress the Japanese people as a hopeful sign.

To address this proposal to the United States, however, is nothing short of diplomatic impertinence. In the Pact of Paris the Japanese government had a treaty of non-aggression with the United States. Japan wantonly violated this treaty by its invasion of China, another signatory. Now the Japanese foreign minister impudently inquires whether "the United States Government have the intention to conclude a non-aggression pact with Japan."

The answer is in the negative, for several reasons. In the first place, because Japan has already broken its obligations under one treaty of non-aggression sponsored by the United States. In the second place, the proposal is inadmissible because Japan has refused Russian offers of a special treaty of non-aggression with that country, thus showing that it is a particular alliance rather than a principle of conduct which Tokyo wishes to establish. Finally, a pact of non-aggression between the United States and Japan at this time would amount to telling the Chinese that we are siding with the armies attacking them, which would comport with neither honor nor national self-interest.

A little historical research would have saved Mr. Hirota a major blunder which, if it elicits any official response, will certainly be one of repudiation. A little more than 11 years ago the French foreign minister, then M. Briand, suggested that the French and American governments should mutually agree never to use war as an instrument of national policy as between those two countries. To this Mr. Kellogg, then our Secretary of State, in due course replied:

> . . . the two governments, instead of contenting themselves with a bilateral declaration of the nature suggested by Mr. Briand, might make a more signal contribution to world peace by joining in an effort to obtain the adherence of all the principal powers of the world to a declaration renouncing war as an instrument of national policy.

From this exchange of views arose the Pact of Paris—sometimes called the Briand-Kellogg Pact—by which the signatories agreed that "the settlement or solution of all disputes or conflicts of whatever nature or of whatever origin they may be, which may arise among them, shall never be sought except by pacific means."

Japan was one of the first nations to adhere to this treaty. China also quickly became a signatory. Since then, in two separate wars of aggression, Japan has violated her signature by invading China. Before suggesting another treaty of non-aggression it would have been more tactful for Mr. Hirota to wait until the Japanese expeditionary force has evacuated Nanking, Peiping, Tientsin and Shanghai. The Chinese are doing their part to facilitate that happy event.

Water Gate Prospects.

With summer's torrid days and humid nights not far off, Washington receives some reassuring news. The Fine Arts Commission has approved plans for a symphony "shell" to be installed on a barge anchored at the Water Gate. Only the approval of the WPA, which would build the structure, seems all that is now needed to assure the city of another series of outdoor evening concerts. Having exceeded its goal in raising funds this year, the National Symphony Orchestra is presumably ready to supply the necessary musicians.

Aside from the esthetic pleasure which they give and the opportunity which they afford, for cool relaxation, outdoor concerts are peculiarly appropriate in the National Capital. Because its population is drawn from all over the country, few cities have more residents who remember fondly that great pre-war institution known as the Saturday night band concert. Nowadays, the automobile, the movie and the radio have led to the eclipse of the institution. But time was when "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," the latest gossip and a bag of hot buttered popcorn on the village green were as certain a part of the Nation's Saturday night routine as the weekly baths that followed.

That outdoor evening entertainment of a musical nature still has an appeal is testified not only by the popularity of the summer concerts presented here in 1935 and 1936 but also by the success of similar, if more elaborate, undertakings in other cities. To mention but a few, New York has its musical evenings at the City College stadium and at Jones Beach; Los Angeles, of course, has its Hollywood Bowl; Boston's "Pop" concerts are as much a characteristic as its Sunday morning codfish cakes; the programs presented at St. Louis during the summer are nationally known.

These last, indeed, suggest that Washington—if it obtains its "shell"—might consider using it for more than just concerts. Many of the summer's pageants, addresses and other public meetings could well be planned for the Water Gate amphitheater.

The Controversy Over ADA.

No amount of controversy over the delay in bringing forth amendments to the Alley Dwelling Authority act should obscure the principles underlying these proposed changes. Washington's chief interest is in getting its slums cleared and providing an equivalent number of low-rent dwelling at the lowest practicable cost. The loss of a few weeks' time in making the essential preparations is less important than the formulation of a sound policy to control these undertakings.

The ADA is known to have submitted proposed amendments to its act last fall. They might have been approved by Congress long ago; except that the United States Housing Authority indicated that it had additional suggestions to make. Since Administrator Straus, of the USHA, sent his proposals to Executive Officer Ihlder, of the ADA, only last month, it does not appear that the former's charge of procrastination is entirely justified. Mr. Ihlder, furthermore, has been waiting for a conference on the subject with the President.

It is the character of the amendments with which the public is chiefly concerned. Mr. Straus wants to make it possible for the local ADA to borrow as other communities do from the national agency which he heads. That is an entirely constructive proposal. Presumably it will be welcomed by the ADA if accompanied by sufficient safeguards to insure continuation of its slum-reclamation activities.

Mr. Straus says that his proposals would not in the slightest limit the existing powers of the ADA. On the contrary, he would extend the authority of the local agency so that it might operate in areas not connected with alley slums. There would seem to be no basis for controversy here. And no differences are likely to arise if the ADA is permitted to continue its work of reclaiming alley squares unfit for further residential use and to preserve the housing policies it has already found to be successful.

Under the United States housing authority act the President may freely allocate housing funds to the ADA. In passing the proposed amendments it should be definitely understood that this section would not cease to be operative. For in that event the ADA would have no funds to reclaim crime-breeding areas that should be redeveloped for recreational or commercial use. The objective of ridding Washington of inhabited alleys is not likely to be achieved unless this aspect of the program is continued.

District projects to be financed by the USHA must naturally conform to the general principles of the Federal act. There is no reason, however, to impose a rigid formula as to subsidies upon every community. If the ADA can continue to reclaim slums and provide good housing for low-income groups without cost to taxpayers, certainly no valid objection can be raised by the subsidy-dispensing authorities. Moreover, if subsidies are found to be desirable in some cases, it would be to the advantage of everyone concerned to limit their application to cases of actual need.

The function of the USHA is to assist local communities in the clearance of slums and the development of low-rental housing. If it is to succeed in all parts of the country, it must necessarily leave a large measure of discretion to local authorities. Of course, it should check extravagance wherever that tendency appears. But in the case of the ADA, which is seeking to eliminate or minimize the need of subsidies, the example seems more worthy of praise than criticism.

Why Not Annapolis?

By all means let us, as President Roosevelt suggests, have a memorial fleet of rebuilt or restored men-o'-war that have played historic roles in our Nation's naval history. It is a project to stir the imagination and make the glamorous past alive.

To the "Constitution" which, through the pennies contributed by school children, now once again proudly rides at anchor, let there be added the "Hartford." Admiral Farragut's flagship, whose decrepit appearance in Charleston harbor stirred the Chief Executive to action; the "Constellation," the "Merrimac," the "Monitor" and others.

But to anchor such a memorial fleet in Tidal Basin would be close to the height of incongruity. The Tidal Basin has great sylvan charm. But it is no fit setting as a museum of naval history. Already one attempt to mar this little body of water has been foiled. It would be a pity if, again in the name of patriotism, the fight to preserve the Tidal Basin were fought all over again.

Why isn't Annapolis harbor the logical place for the memorial fleet? Because of setting and association it would seem the ideal place for the ships, actual or in replica, so intimately associated with the Naval Academy and those who are training to carry on America's great naval traditions.

Resurrection Theory.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was very much interested in the letter from Clara Louise John, which appeared in your paper of April 25, and heartily agree with her sentiments in regard to the need of a more tangible and personal application of the doctrine of the resurrection to mankind. I would like to offer a small expression of thought on the matter.

The clergy of numerous denominations tell us that we must believe in the doctrine of the resurrection of the body and it is, indeed, undoubtedly a most important article of the Christian faith, for it will be the climax of all human happiness. But there are very few who endeavor to offer to the human race a satisfactory solution of the manner in which this great event will take place.

St. Paul has given us the most satisfactory answer. He likens the resurrection of the body to the growth of a seed. He asks the question: "How are the dead raised up, and with what body do they come?" And he answers: "Senseless man! That which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, perchance of wheat, or of some other body, but God giveth it a body, and to every seed its proper (or its own) body."

In my opinion, the astral body, which leaves the material body at death contains the soul. This astral body, which has been seen by some people at the hour of death, is believed by some psychological experts to be a very fine form of matter. This, I think, is the connecting link between the old body that lies in the grave and the future resurrection body. It is, I believe, the seed from which the new body will be formed. By what manner or at what time this process will go on, I dare not attempt to express. G. F. F.

On Spending To Save.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The theory so much in evidence these disturbing days, that a nation can spend its way out of trouble, originated in very ancient times among erratic men that ignored certain fundamental facts concerning life and being.

People, of old, mixed baser metals with gold in vain attempts to curb deficits while we devalue money, which is precisely the same procedure, only in modern form. History, moreover, reveals that ancient Rome indulged in unheard of spending orgies, in order to dissipate debt, as did France, prior to their revolution, which attempts culminated in chaos. And not so many years ago, Australia distributed public funds, with lavish hand, thereby temporarily creating a false, fictitious state of prosperity, only to see the plan topple and crash.

History repeats itself. Today, the moss-covered idea that we "must spend, in order to save" is advanced by Harry Hopkins, in his latest book, and indorsed by President Roosevelt, not to mention a host of other "brain-busters." Haven't these gentlemen overlooked the simple fact that economic law is virtually as fixed as the law of gravity and cannot be trifled with or violated without disastrous consequences? The existent depression has proved as much.

Swedenborg's Clairvoyance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was surprised to see the following statement in The Post of May 5, wherein the Rev. Charles Harvey said: "Emanuel Swedenborg did not advocate spiritual communication with the dead, and, contrary to Wickland's writings, he actually warned against such a practice."

Here are Swedenborg's own words: "I have been premitted to converse with all whom I have known in the life of the body . . . They wish me to say they are not dead, being men now just the same as before and they have only migrated from one world to another and that they were not conscious of having lost anything, since they were in the body and in the possession of bodily sense as before and in the enjoyment of understanding, sensation and desire, similar to those they had in the world."

Swedenborg believed all human beings to be potentially clairvoyant, and he did not claim uniqueness, or forbid others from seeking the experiences given to him, as his following words clearly reveal: "Man was so created that during his life on earth amongst men he might, at the same time, also live in heaven amongst angles and during his life among angles he might, at the same time, also live on earth amongst men, so that heaven and earth might be together, and might form one, men knowing what is in heaven and angles what is in the world."

Call For Complaints.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An old buddy, exploding with laughter, handed me a news item wherein Harry Hopkins overflowed with indignation at reports of political coercion against PWA help, made the righteous demand to be apprised of any chicanery and irregularity—thus seemingly attesting a desire to kill this New Deal growth as vote machine.

It recalled the post armistice A. E. F. when gripes were bootlegged home via French post. Home folks, resenting such complaints in view of what they had been nicked in taxes and debt, attempts were made by Army powers to eradicate grounds for criticism.

A company would fall in and visiting inspecting officer call for complaints. The C. O., or possibly the top dog or top cheese known as first sergeant, would yell: "Youse men has hoid wot th' cap'n ast youse. Youse wot's got any kick about the chow or how this outfit's bein' handled—one pace forrad, and sound off."

The first request yielded several volunteers who cut loose a series of grievances and criticisms. The ranking officer and staff heard them gravely, held an offside huddle with company powers, and departed after a sop about "a fine body of men." What he did with the data, except add it to the body of Government statistics, is still mystery.

Five minutes after departure of the inspecting menage and stooges, the sergeant would "fall in" the outfit, and read off names of the objectors for long stretches of the less esteemed duties. When another inspector arrived with the usual request, it would be met by sardonic throttled laughter, which the inspector interpreted accurately. E. G. BARR.

The Use Of Radium.

Progress is being made slowly but surely in the treatment of cancer by radium, and the eighth annual reports of the National Radium Trust and the Radium Commission are therefore encouraging documents. It is only now, indeed, becoming clear that progress has depended from the beginning upon technical accomplishment in the use of radium, and that little increase of benefit could be looked for until the foundations of knowledge and of practice had been soundly laid. The Radium Commission has laid these foundations partly by its policy of setting up centers in great hospitals and partly by its insistence upon the necessity of employing specially trained radiologists. The commission is now considering the possibility of establishing new centers in areas which at present remain largely without facilities for treatment.

The outlook of surgery, it is stated, is changing rapidly in respect of those areas of the body in which radiotherapy has a field of application, and the previous practice of a routine operation with radiotherapy as a reserve for recurrences has been virtually abandoned in the best centers. On the other hand the lack of doctors with special training remains a great difficulty. The commission insists, and its view will be generally indorsed, that cancer should be attacked not only by one method, but by all methods simultaneously, and that the attack ought to be universal throughout the country. This demand that the Government shall make itself responsible for a national scheme is supported by the contention that there has never been a more favorable time, and that support would certainly be forthcoming from the laity, the hospitals, both voluntary and statutory, and from universities and colleges of physicians and surgeons.

Old Hickory's House.

"THE HERMITAGE," by Stanley F. Horn. (Garrett & Massie, $3.)

THOSE WHO DELIGHT in the study of early American homes may acknowledge an indebtedness to Stanley F. Horn for his labors into the records concerning the Hermitage, home of Andrew Jackson. He has, we think, said the last word on the ancient mansion. Would that someone might say the last word on the controversial figure who inhabited it!

But Mr. Horn, editor, publisher and foremost student of the Hermitage, has capably combined the records (the photographic ones, too) to bring to clear light one of the most interesting of American homes. It is the first time the Hermitage has been so competently done.

Historians perennially wrangle over Jackson and the temptation to leap in the fray was not entirely resisted by Mr. Horn. He has much to say of Jackson and he says it emphatically. But the merit of the book lies in his painstaking record of the mansion. For historians, in their loud praise or louder beratings of Jackson, had taken little pains to look at the house where Jackson lived.

There Mr. Horn's researches seem almost to have been a passion, and the result is as fine a description of an American house as has been written. SCOTT HART.

"FATHERLAND, FAREWELL," by Gosta Larsson. (Harcourt, Brace, $2.50.)

THIS NOVEL TELLS of an ambitious young Swede, Hjalmar, whose dream is to build bridges. The time is shortly before the World War, and the locale is not the Sweden of the middle way but a fatherland of poverty and distress from which there is yet one escape—America. Brave souls like the industrious Hanna people the pages of this book, men and women who sometimes struggle on but all too often fall by the wayside. The hero, Hjalmar, returns from days of hard labor to nights of intense study. The vision of his bridge ever before him, he pushes out of his life the love which comes with the gentle, unobtrusive Elin. In the end, however, it is Elin who triumphs, stands beside Hjalmar her husband and holds out the hope of the "free land," the United States, where both may live happily in the future.

"Fatherland, Farewell!" is not a great novel, but it is a gripping one. Occasionally the novelist's English clings too closely to the Swedish, as when the busy Hanna is said to have "much to stand in." Frequently there are passages of rare insight and beauty, such as the description of a midsummer eve in the author's native land. Gosta Larsson writes well and should go far. He is, incidentally, not related to Chevy Chase.

ANYONE coming to Washington for the first time, either to live or to visit, must wonder at the unusual name of the city's fair suburb to the northwest—Chevy Chase. At least it is unique in that no other town in the United States (or in the world so far as I know) bears its name. We are told in the new WPA guide, "Washington: City and Capital," that the land about what is now Chevy Chase on both sides of the District line was originally the proprietory estate held by Joseph Belt, one-time (1725-37) member of the Maryland House of Burgesses and colonel of militia in the French and Indian War and that his estate was known as Cheivy Chace.

Now the name Chevy Chase was old when Col. Belt was born, in 1680. It referred originally to the Cheviot, or Chyviat Hills, a mountain range between Scotland and England, as famous now as a sheep country as it was in olden times as a hunting ground, or chase. It was here that a riproaring fight is supposed once to have taken place between the "Ynglishe" and the "Skottishe" knights, a fight gloriously recorded in "The Ancient Ballad of Chevy Chase," or "The Hunting of the Cheviot," the story itself dating from the fifteenth century.

It seems that Percy, the Earl of Northumberland, liked to hunt, but it was one of the laws of the marches that if you wanted to hunt over the border you had to get permission from the lord-warden, in this case Earl Douglas. These two martial families hadn't been getting along very well anyway, and Percy said he'd be damned if he'd condescend to ask leave of that "doughty" Douglas. In fact, he intended to hunt deer three days without saying yes or no to anybody. So he hunted . . . and then they "fit."

Percy had 1,500 archers, and Douglas 2,000 spearmen, and all were slain except "fifti and thre" and "five and fifti," respectively. Percy and Douglas fought hand to hand with swords "till they both did sweat." They fought until they were both ready to call it quits, but there suddenly came an arrow and struck Earl Douglas, and that was the end of him. Whereupon big-hearted Percy exclaimed: "To have saved thy life I would have parted with my lands for three years!" But "them was his last words," for a Skottishe knyght by the name of Sir Hugh Montgomery, who had seen Douglas die, rode straight through a hundred archers and dealt Percy a blow with his sure spear "that was full soare." And then all who were left fought some more:

> This battell begane in Chyviat
> An owar befor the none,
> And when even-song bell was rung
> The battell was not half done.

They fought on by the light of the moon—Sir John Haggerstone, Sir Roger Hartley, Sir William Heron, Sir George Lovel, Sir Ralph the rich Rokeby—all were slain, even Roger Widrington, who deserves special mention:

> For when both his leggis were > hewne in to,
> He knyled and fought on hys kne.

When word of the battle reached "Jamy the Skottishe Kyng" he wrung his hands and cried, "Alas and woe ys me!" And when King Harry IV in "lovly Londone" heard that Lord Percy was slain he said, "God have merci on his soll," and vowed that his death would be requitted.

It is a stirring old ballad if there ever was one. Sir William Sidney in 1595 said: "I never heard the old song of Percie and Douglas that I found not my heart moved more than with a Trumpet," though he naively wondered what its effect would have been if it were "trimmed in the gorgeous eloquence of Pindar" instead of the simple rude style of the Scottish tongue. Even Ben Jonson, the old classicist, was enthusiastic and declared that he would rather have written "The Ballad of Chevy Chase" than all his own works put together. Joseph Addison praised it in his Spectator papers. Bishop Thomas Percy, who claimed to have recovered the genuine antique version of the ballad in his "Reliques of Ancient English Poetry," remarked that this ballad "has equally been the amusement of our childhood and the favourite of our riper years."

The Belts of Maryland are traditionally of Scottish origin, and so it is not improbable that Col. Joseph Belt, who patented Chevy Chase in 1725, knew the popular ballad of Chevy Chase, though he died four years before Percy's "Reliques" appeared to give it a wide reading public. Directly or indirectly the name must have come to him from the Scottish border. It is a name with deep and meaningful overtones, harking back to the days of the ancient minstrels, to pre-Shakespearean England, to "foul debate 'twixt noblemen," and to the deer and the green woods of the Cheviot Hills. We can surmise that Col. Belt, too, liked the hunt, for during his career in the House of Burgesses his name was connected with a bill entitled, "An Act to Prevent the Untimely Killing of Deer."

Fishing And Such.

EVERY MAN to his own fun, but I once took a little whirl at that deep sea, or dipsey, fishing, as they call it, and if there are any of those St. Bernard or Great Dane fish allotted to me in those waters down off Florida Mr. Roosevelt may have them. I got caught up on that kind of fishing for all time in the space of about three days several years ago. We went out in a couple of little party boats and all the way down to the fishing place Charlie Canoy, the press agent for Henry Doherty's hotels, was telling us about the fish we were going to catch. We were going after tarpon, for choice, but the water was supposed to be absolutely reeking of all kinds of fish with queer names like dace, mace, place, roach, poach, gudgeon, mullet, grommet and shovel-nosed duebills.

PEGLER.

The guides, who also were to do the cooking, which consisted of opening cans and fixing the bacon and coffee, were Florida Conchs, pronounced Conks. That is the name of the people who live along the keys. In no time they got to arguing whether the shark was more dangerous than the barracuda. One said he would slap a shark in the face but couldn't be bribed to go overboard where barracuda were about. The other one said just the opposite. They always do. It is an act.

We got to the place, anchored in the barley water beside a channel, rigged up a lot of tackle with hooks the size of those on which they hang half-cows in butcher shops, and went out trolling in small launches. The sun was fierce. We trolled for several hours in the morning, came back, had some beans and coffee, trolled all afternoon and came back to bed down in little bunks. We didn't catch any fish but Charlie said they would probably be running next day.

• • • •

THEY WEREN'T, or the third day, either. By that time we dudes, or tourists, in the party were burned as red as fire engines and the mosquitoes were coming out in absolute clouds. Jimmy Pergola, that nice little newsreel man who was killed last year on that safety flight for one of the big air lines out West, said one mosquito bit a hunk out of him and flew up a tree to eat it, but dropped it into the water with a big splash while whetting its bill on a limb.

"And a shark came up and snagged it," Jimmy said. "Don't tell me sharks don't eat people meat."

Charlie did catch a little shark about 4 feet long on a small rod one night and it wrestled him all over the dory.

He flopped among the seats, got tangled up in a lot of rope and fish line, fell on his face, skinned up his nose, elbows and shins and looked like a preliminary boy by the time one of the Conchs reached over the side, grabbed the shark with his hands, slit it along the keel with the bread knife and tossed it back in the water.

"That ought chum up some grown-up sharks," he said. This one had half-killed our pal and it was only a fingerling.

I don't know; maybe it's just me. Other people catch fish, but I never can. I like to fish for trouts and basses in little streams and lakes, but I never catch any. A fellow named Woods will go down to the stream and catch a dozen or so most any time, but all I ever got was a damn turtle, and generally I just leave my flies, hooks and leaders snagged on the branches.

• • • • •

I CAN'T PLAY golf, either. I started trying 15 years ago, and you would think I would be getting hot by now. But I'm worse than ever. I have had dozens of lessons and from good instructors, too. Pull in your neck, keep your ears well apart, swivel on your back spin, turn your hand further over. Nuts. If I haul off and give it, the ball does an outcurve and comes back like a boomerang.

If I baby it to prevent the hook, it goes pt-pt-pt 3 yards and stops, and the dolls sitting on the verandah laugh shrilly. After three strokes I am still on my own goal line and have to punt. Some days I can sock all right, but those days I can't hit irons or putt. It is a terrible way to be. I have broken 100 only once. Everybody beats me, even women and cartoonists.

When I was a kid I was a punk ball player. I liked to, but I just wasn't any good. Football the same. Skating the same.

I play a little poker, but I always lose. Same story. Always. Win a few cheap pots with straight flushes early in the evening and get knocked in the crick on big pots toward closing time with aces up against three lousy deuces.

I try to live right and follow the instructions, but it never makes any difference. Maybe that is what makes me so mean.

The Once Over

Scene: Deck of the Italian flagship Conte di Cavour during the recent reception to Hitler.

Mussolini—Are we happy to have you with us, Adolf! Just look at that display of force!

Hitler (a little uneasy)—You're certainly trying to make me happy, Benito.

Mussolini (with great gusto)—What a fleet! I call your attention to the fact it numbers 190 ships. I could have made this a smaller review but not for a guest as important as you, my dear Adolf.

Hitler (jumping slightly at a salvo of 8-inch guns)—I can't tell you how I appreciate your tender regard for me!

Mussolini—Notice those first-class, 35,000-ton battleships coming into line!

Hitler—Why are you doing all this for me? Aren't you exerting yourself?

Mussolini—Not at all. My motto is, "Anything to please a friend."

• • • •

Hitler (as 18 swift cruisers come into view)—I really don't feel that I am deserving of all this attention.

Mussolini—Don't be foolish. I'd do as much for anybody I really like. Look at those 19 flotilla leaders! Behold those 24 sub-chasers!

Hitler (now quite unhappy)—There is no need of putting yourself out like this, really.

Mussolini—Don't talk like that. I just want to treat you like a brother.

Hitler—It's all very nice of you, but . . .

Mussolini—You wouldn't want to go back to Berlin feeling that Italy had not shown you the love and regard one peace-loving country should always show to another, would you?

Hitler (awkwardly)—I suppose not.

• • • •

Mussolini (in ecstacy)—Look what's coming up now! Eighty-five submarines! Count 'em! Eighty-five! And more under construction. They've got everything! Boy, could they make it hot for any enemy fleet! (As an afterthought) That is, of course, assuming I had an enemy.

Hitler—Yes, of course. Just assuming.

• • • •

Mussolini—Ah! Look! Forty-eight bombing seaplanes all rising at once! Don't you feel a big kick now?

Hitler (looking quickly behind him)—I had an impression to that effect; yes.

Mussolini—No! No! Not that kind of a kick. Don't you realize you are among friends and well-wishers?

Hitler (as the review reaches a height and salvos split the air)—With a demonstration of love and affection such as this, I can hardly doubt it.

Mussolini (as six superbombers perform)—Adolf, is it not wonderful! Have I left out anything that might make you realize the esteem in which I hold you?

Hitler (emphatically)—Nein! Nein! I have never had an experience that made it so clear to me where my friends are.

Mussolini (signaling for another salvo of 9-inch guns and embracing him)—Brother!

Hitler (getting up after being floored by the concussion of bombs from the bombing planes and kissing Mussolini on both cheeks)—My pal!

Refugee Problem

Geneva Hopes For Centralization Of Agencies As Result Of American Proposal To Assist Austrians Ousted By Nazis.

By Bertram Pickard.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

THE PROPOSALS made on March 25 by the United States Department of State for a conference on Austrian and other refugees were received in Geneva and elsewhere in Europe with great interest and appreciation.

There are three categories of Austrians who need, or will need, assistance and legal protection from some international organ:

(1) Those Austrians who have already fled the country;

(2) Austrians resident abroad before March 12 last who will refuse to apply for a German passport;

(3) Austrians still in Austria who desire to leave.

Statistics concerning the first category are still incomplete. But it is safe to say they include two or three thousand persons who had played active roles in the left-wing parties.

The total number cannot be very large, as the frontiers were closed so soon. But it must be several thousands in all. For example, I heard recently on good authority that some 3,000 Austrian refugees were distributed among the hotels and pensions in Zurich.

Austrians Forced Out Of Homeland Are Problem.

IT IS the third category, however, that is by far the most important, in view of the application of the Nuremberg laws of 1935 against non-Aryans of Austria.

The Jewish population of Austria is put at 200,000 persons, of whom 176,000 are residents in Vienna. But since marriages were common between Jews and "Aryans," the total number of non-Aryans, as meant by the Nuremberg laws, is estimated at no less than 600,000 persons.

In addition, it is believed that a least 200,000 persons who played an active part in trade unions, the Social Democratic Party and the Monarchial Party may be obliged to seek sanctuary outside the Reich.

There are some other factors, moreover, which may tend to maximize the seriousness of the potential problem. For example, at the time the Treaty of St. Germain was signed certain Jewish elements of the population of Austro-Hungary (notably from Galicia) acquired Austrian nationality. Since powerful sanctions of anti-Semistic opinion in Austria had alwawys protested against this, it is possible that the persons in question may be denationalized.

Again, since the Austrian Jews on the average are porer than the German Jews, the problem of their emigration may well become even more acute than was the case with the German Jews.

Yet, again, as an important proportion of the Austrian Jews are engaged in the liberal professions the disabilities under the Nuremberg laws for such elements will be very grave. The average age of the Jewish population of Vienna is about 45

The above facts and figures are drawn from official sources; so that the figures cited may be regarded as conservative estimates.

Two Geneva Offices Already In Existence.

THE TWO OFFICIAL League bodies dealing with refugees are the Nansen International Office (for Russian, Armenian and certain other small categories) and the High Commissioner for Refugees Coming from Germany (Sir Neill Malcolm).

More than once in recent years an attempt has been made by some governments, backed by private refugee organizations, to co-ordinate the work for all refugees in one central body under League authority. Indeed, at the last Assembly (October, 1937) this plan had the support of all League members with the exception of the Soviet government, which refused to agree on the grounds that, in its view, the work for Russian refugees should now be liquidated together with the Nansen Office at the end of 1938.

At the January Council meeting this year a committee of three was appointed (France, Great Britain and Bolivia) to try and find some way around this difficulty. The committee has met once already and is not without hope that the way will be found of gaining the necessary Soviet agreement.

In the meantime the juridical basis for a rational and reasonably humane treatment of refugees was laid in February of this year when seven countries (Great Britain, France, Holland, Norway, Denmark, Belgium and Spain) signed a convention of this nature with special reference to refugees coming from Germany, which followed closely a similar convention devised for the Russian refugees in 1933.

When the above convention was signed last February in Geneva a statement was made by The Netherlands government representative, supported by the delegates of Belgium, the United Kingdom, Spain, Poland and Switzerland, to the effect that the problem of German refugees cannot be definitely settled without an international body which would prepare and organize the emigration of those political refugees who cannot be absorbed in the countries of first refuge. The same governments even went so far as to hint that they might be unable to apply the terms of the convention regarding status and humane treatment unless they were given positive guarantees that this problem of emigration, or re-emigration could be solved.

United States Might Best Treat With Hitler.

WITH THE FOREGOING facts in mind, one may perhaps venture some reflections and conclusions, especially as regards the three principal points in the refugee problem, namely, settlement, capital transfer and status.

It is hardly surprising that a number of countries of first refuge, i. e., neighbors of the Reich (including what was Austria), have closed their frontiers to Austrian refugees and require a visa for all Austrian nationals wishing to enter their territory.

These countries feel that, in view of the large number of refugees already there, they simply dare not risk accepting more unless arrangements for re-emigration are in prospect. Furthermore, it is felt that if they did eventually permit entry of considerable numbers, the least the German government should do, in all the circumstances, would be to permit the refugees to take out with them a reasonable proportion of their wealth, so as to facilitate their settlement elsewhere.

It is considered in League circles and by refugee organizations (official and non-official) that the United States government could render an immense service, therefore, on the first two points—settlement and capital transfer—by (a) bringing together, for practical consideration, the countries of possible eventual settlement so as to deal with the whole problem of emigration and re-emigration; and (b) undertaking perhaps the chief responsibility for negotiating with the German government an agreement concerning the rights of the refugees to take with them an adequate proportion of their property and capital.

As regards the third point—status—it is felt that to create yet a further category of refugees (i. e. from Austria) would be very confusing to various governmental administrative bureaus and wasteful of energy and resources. It is pointed out, moreover, that, with the agreement of the signatories, the 1938 convention giving a certain status to refugees coming from Germany could easily be extended to the Austrian (now German) refugees.

It is fully realized that the American initiative is based on the immediate urgency of the problem. But it is felt that this problem may last for some time, and those who have worked hard to co-ordinate and rationalize the whole work for refugees during many years past venture to hope, that for the longer effort it may prove possible for the United States to co-operate on equal terms with the League states in administering a single refugee agency in which the functions of the existing Nansen Office and the High Commissioner for Refugees Coming from Germany would be fused, as is planned at present. American co-operation in various technical and humanitarian efforts of the League furnish ample precedents.

It is believed here that if the United States would co-operate in the wider work for refugees, and not only in connection with the Austrian emergency, then all fear of overlapping and waste of effort could easily be avoided; while Soviet Russia would be most unlikely to continue its opposition to a rational centralization of the whole refugee service.

Finally, one ventures to think that at any conference resulting from the American initiative—whether in Switzerland or elsewhere—representatives of the League Secretariat, as well as of the Nansen Office and the High Commissioner for Refugees Coming from Germany should be invited to contribute from their experience, accumulated over long years.

The Geneva Paradox.

IN AN INDIRECT and paradoxical but nonetheless significant fashion, the present meeting of the League Council, tragic though it is in some particulars, nonetheless reveals the basic vitality of the Geneva system.

The point need not be labored that the League as created by Wilson, Smuts, Cecil and the others who helped bring it into being at Paris 19 years ago, is today in a state of all but total eclipse. That fact is apparent to all. The technical activities of the League go on uninterruptedly. But as an agency for preventing war or, alternatively, punishing the aggressor, the League may almost be said to have passed out of the international picture.

• • • •

POWER POLITICS of the old-fashioned, cynical variety has taken the place of the collective approach to the problem of peace. Economic and financial sanctions, tried but once and then belatedly and haltingly, have been shelved for an indefinite period. And now even the League's second line of defense—the non-recognition policy as applied to territories acquired by force—is being undermined by allegedly realistic considerations, at least in the case of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia.

It is difficult for even the most optimistic League partisan to glean any comfort from this state of affairs. Nevertheless, the fact cannot be ignored that the League and what it once stood for and may, who knows, represent again, continue to have a place and a meaning in the present highly disturbed scheme of things. And the principles of the Geneva organization continue to receive at least the left-handed loyalty of its members.

• • • •

The League has on its books a resolution condemning Italy for her aggression against Ethiopia and binding the members not to recognize the conquest of that country. Since that action was taken many League members—the latest being Czechoslovakia—have for one reason or another recognized the King of Italy as Emperor of Ethiopia. However, none of the three great powers on the Council—Great Britain, France and Russia—has yet done so.

Recently Great Britain and Italy concluded a pact designed to restore friendly relations between the two countries. Among other things the London government tacitly promised that it would reverse British policy on the Ethiopian question. And as a preliminary step Britain promised to urge the League Council to free the hands of League members on this issue. In that way the League's nonrecognition policy as applied to Italy would remain unchanged; no precedent for abandoning that policy would be created, but individual nations would, without flouting their commitments as League members, be free to recognize Italy's sovereignty over Ethiopia if they saw advantages in doing so.

IT IS INTERESTING to note that the British proposal was designed to spare the League Council the humiliation of asking for a rescinding of the non-recognition resolution altogether. And it is equally interesting that even the milder step urged upon the Geneva organization by the London government is meeting without stout resistance.

Bald-headed men don't quarrel over a comb. If it makes no immediate or ultimate difference what stand the League takes or fails to take, the hard-boiled statesmen assembled at Geneva would waste no time arguing what the nature of Council's response to the British move should be. Apparently some of them, at least, feel that it does make a difference whether the League agrees to restore freedom of action to its members on the Ethiopian question or whether it does not. In other words there are nations which, looking into the future—it may be the distant future—do not want the League to establish unfortunate precedents that might hamper its ultimate effectiveness.

Thus Great Britain and France, which is prepared to follow the British lead in this matter, may have to content themselves simply with a statement by the president of the League Council explaining what the democratic powers plan to do regarding Ethiopia.

• • • •

SO FAR AS British-Italian relations are concerned, this may be enough. It is taken for granted that, come what may, Great Britain will recognize Italy's sovereignty over Ethiopia and thus help wipe the slate clean of a problem which has for some years made for enmity between them.

But, at the same time, the battered League may come out of the present test preserving at least some shred of its basic principles against the day of resurrection. And that, for the time being, is about all that can be expected. For the League's present problem is simply that of survival. So long as it manages to survive it can, when the time is ripe for it, be made to function. That may be a long time off. But in a world of cataclysmic change nothing is impossible.

• • • •

TO BE SURE, there are some who say that the eclipse of Geneva and the replacement of the system of collective security by a system of separate deals between nations, as, for instance, the recent deal between Great Britain and Italy, has aided the cause of peace. They point to the undoubted fact that, during the past few weeks there has been a certain easing of international tensions in Europe.

But if such deals are capable at this juncture of establishing permanent peace in Europe, similar deals between 1904 and 1914 should have made a world war impossible in the latter year.

In that decade there were deals between Great Britain and France, Great Britain and Russia, Russia and Austria, Russia and Germany, Germany and France, France and Italy, and many others. Each was hailed in its time as a step toward peace. But the cumulative effect of all of them was undoubtedly disastrous. The parallel between the prewar system and the present one is sinister. The breakdown of collective security may have been inevitable, the spirit of unbridled nationalism being what it is. But only those nations which see an advantage in a regime of international anarchy can afford to rejoice in the League's eclipse.

The Cliveden Set

By Claud Cockburn

Unofficial Foreign Office.

THAT HITLER is thought of by wide circles of the British Conservative Party as the "bulwark against Bolshevism in Europe" is one of his strongest cards in the Anglo-German political game.

Within approximately the past 18 months, the attitude toward Germany has crystallized in what has very recently come to be known as the "Cliveden set."

Cliveden is the Thames Valley country residence of Viscountess (Nancy) Astor, sometime of Virginia and now wife of Viscount Astor, owner of the weekly Sunday newspaper the Observer. Her brother-in-law, Maj. John Jacob Astor, owns the controlling interest in the London Times. Both are influenced, directly or indirectly, by the energetic and sprightly Lady Astor.

In a country where so much of the most important politics is played at week-ends in large country houses, Cliveden, by reason of the passionate political interest of its hostess, and the enormous power which her family wealth and newspaper connections represent, has been one of the most politically important of British country houses.

• • • •

MOST PROMINENT and active of the personalities associated with Cliveden are Lady Astor, Lord Astor, Maj. Astor, Lord Lothian, Lord Londonderry, chief of the Conservative Party organization; Geoffrey Dawson, editor of the Times; Sir Neville Henderson, British Ambassador to Berlin; Lord Halifax himself, and a string of satellites, mostly politicians on the make.

The cabinet ministers most closely associated with the set are Sir Samuel Hoare, the present home secretary, and Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer.

Active dislike of the French, fear and hatred of all "popular" movements, a consequent admiration for the "defensive" possibilities of Hitlerism, and, mixed with that, a fear amounting to panic of a possible German attack upon Britain are the principal common characteristics of the members of the set. Their attitude toward the Soviet Union needs no description.

Earle Asks Writ To Stop Jury's Bribe Inquiry

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 9.—Pennsylvania's Democratic primary fight got into the State Supreme Court today on a move by Gov. George H. Earle and others high in the Commonwealth administration to head off a grand jury investigation of coercion and bribery charges.

The high court, with the investigation ordered to begin Wednesday at Harrisburg and the primary May 17, took under advisement a petition for a writ of prohibition.

The petition was presented by William A. Schnader, Philadelphia lawyer, who was the Republican nominee for Governor in 1934 and lost to Earle as the latter became Pennsylvania's first Democratic chief executive in 44 years.

Subpenas Going Out.

Schnader, representing Gov. Earle and Attorney General Guy K. Bard, contended the Dauphin County (Harrisburg) Court lacked authority to conduct the grand jury inquiry. He said the attorney general did have such authority. He added that Bard was investigating—and with Gov. Earle's "unqualified" support.

The accusations upon which the grand jury call was based, in part, were directed against two Earle administration officials and one Democratic organization leader by former Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, an independent candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. He asserted $20,000 from "brewery interests" bought favorable State legislation in 1935. Earle fired him and named Bard after Margiotti refused to give his evidence to Earle.

District Attorney Carl B. Shelley of Dauphin County announced tonight he would "fight to the last" to conduct the investigation. He demanded a hearing on the petition and was promised one by Chief Justice John W. Kephart.

May Call Guffey.

Later, Shelley said he was "all ready—subpenas are going out today. How many subpenas and for whom? I won't tell. I'm not spoiling anything."

"Nothing to say" was his reply to a query as to whether one of the subpenas was out for United States Senator Joseph F. Guffey.

Senator Guffey, who split with Gov. Earle over selection of a Democratic gubernatorial candidate by the State Democratic committee, had said in a recent campaign speech that there might be certain disclosures at the State capitol.

Young Democrats Sued for Debts

Demand that the Young Democratic Clubs of America, or the clubs' high-ranking officers, pay up an allegedly overdue bill for office equipment was made in District Court yesterday when M. S. Ginn & Co. filed suit for $1,377.52.

The company, through Attorneys John Paul Jones and Thomas B. Heffelfinger, said that the account had been running with it from 1935 to March 20, 1937. Officers named as defendants were Pitt Tyson Maner, president, of Montgomery, Ala.; Mrs. Ocie Heady, vice president, of Oklahoma City; John M. Bailey, treasurer, of Hartford, Conn.; Paul A. Williams, secretary, Columbus, Ohio, and Charles H. Shreve, acting executive secretary, of the Shoreham Hotel.

The attached bills showed the clubs had purchased quantities of office equipment from the firm.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

When Mary Pickford visited the National Archives the other day she hinted of an early return to American movies . . . And this excited the Archives girls as much as that lavish diamond pin on the sporty bolero Miss Pickford wore . . . The facts are these: On the very day she was in town a letter came from Hollywood asking her return to a serious play in which she would have a serious part . . . She said she didn't know whether or not to accept; she seemed interested but not excited . . .

Representatives of 21 groups of the United Federal Workers of America meet tonight at the headquarters to heat the boilers in a drive for enactment of the workers' appeals bill (Bigelow) . . . They will be armed with a petition from the field, carrying more than 3,000 signatures and urging the Congress to act before it expires in the summer heat and the election travails. Representative Robert Ramspeck—the rock of employes' rights—is, we hear, more interested right now in the wages and hours contention than in the appeals bill—and it is to him, so much, that the Federal boys and girls are looking for assistance . . .

The U. F. W. A. are planning the attack on a wide front, and the movement will be aggressive . . . Spending Control Restored To President in House Aid Bill propriations in the past have been made in a lump sum, with the President allocating them to WPA, PWA and other relief agencies.

Spend

Asked about the change, Chairman Clifton A. Woodrum, of the appropriations "recovery" subcommittee, said it was designed to make WPA projects subject to the same check as PWA expenditures.

Although the bill introduced yesterday appropriates only $2,519,425,000, actually $3,054,425,000 in outlays is authorized, through continuance of the $500,000,000 PWA revolving fund and other authorizations.

To WPA, $1,250,000,000 is appropriated; for the National Youth Administration, $75,000,000; for the Farm Security Administration, $175,000,000, and to the Public Works Administration, $965,000,000.

Although only $25,000,000 is appropriated immediately for Federal public buildings, the $70,000,000 authorized last year for a 3-year Federal building program, is increased to $130,000,000. The increase would make funds available for two new postoffices or other Federal buildings in virtually every Congressional district, instead of one such structure in the 3-year period.

Leaders told the President there will be no serious difficulty in passing the recovery measure through the House. Efforts to earmark the program nevertheless threatened. Representative John Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, last night claimed enough votes to write a $200,000,000 allotment for the Rural Electrification Administration into the bill.

House Republicans will confer today on minority proposals to return administration of the $1,250,000 relief program and to defeat the PWA "priming" program.

The chief earmarking threat to the program is expected to develop in the Senate, where a conservative group of Senators are studying methods of curbing the President's spending authority.

Meanwhile, in Nashville, Tenn., yesterday, Senator George L. Berry, the President's former industrial recovery co-ordinator, said the spending-lending program is continuing "abnormal treatment to a greater degree than to my mind is justified by the facts." Berry said emergency treatment of economic conditions, "if made permanent, will ultimately destroy the patient."

The Tennessee Senator said he will not make his race for re-election "on a basis of waste and patronage, but on the principles of sound economy in the conduct of government."

The initial print of the bill eliminates a suggestion by the President that the Government aid communities otherwise unable to obtain funds for PWA building, by paying the interest on its building loans. The bill entails 4 per cent interest payments.

The measure further provides:

"In the event Constitutional limitations of a State or other political subdivision prohibits participation in the PWA program by way of loan and grant, the administrator, with the approval of the President, may advance money to any such public agency upon agreement to pay back in annual installments, over a period of not to exceed 25 years, at least 55 per cent of the amount so advanced, with interest for the period of amortization.

At one stroke the bill extends until June 30, 1939, the life of the WPA, the National Youth Administration, the Farm Security Administration, the National Emergency Council, the National Resources Committee and the Prison Industries Reorganization Board. The PWA would be continued until June 30, 1940.

The following breakdown in WPA's $1,250,000,000 7-month appropriation was provided, with a 15 per cent transfer leeway between classes of projects:

$425,000,000 for highways, roads and streets.

$575,000,000 for public buildings, parks, public utilities, rural electric transmission lines, sewer systems, airports, flood control, conservation, eradication of insect pests and soil fertilization.

$250,000,000 for educational and white-collar projects.

WPA funds would be subject to the Woodrum amendment, requiring the full amount of the appropriation to be spread over seven months. Unexpended balances remaining at the end of the current fiscal year are continued available.

The bill bans undertaking of Federal construction projects (except flood control and water conservation projects authorized under other acts) until sufficient funds for completion have been allocated. On non-Federal projects, the sponsor would be required to make a written statement that if allocated funds are not sufficient to complete the project, the sponsor will finance the balance.

The measure provides for prevailing rates of pay for work of a similar nature in the same locality, as determined by WPA. Though not registered on WPA relief rolls, persons in actual need of relief would have the same eligibility for employment as those who heretofore appeared on the rolls. No relief worker would be eligible for WPA employment who had refused employment on another Federal or non-Federal project at a comparable wage rate. Similarly, any relief worker who turned down a bona-fide offer of private employment at comparable wages, would be kept off relief rolls for the period of the private job.

Grants Limited.

The PWA section of the bill provides that not more than $750,000,000 of the $965,000,000 shall be used for grants, and no grant shall be made in excess of 45 per cent of the cost of a non-Federal project. Funds would not be allotted for PWA projects that cannot be commenced before January 1, 1939, and substantially completed before June 30, 1940. After August 31, 1938, no new applications for PWA loans or grants for non-Federal projects shall be received, except those of an "amendatory" character. PWA would be authorized to spend up to $100,000,000 for Federal construction projects, with the Government putting up the total cost. PWA administrative expenditures would be restricted to $11,000,000.

General Accounting Office	$4,180,000
Procurement division, Treasury	5,500,000
Disbursement division, Treasury	3,500,000

It is a fine and true play that Maxwell Anderson has written in "The Star-Wagon," which opened a week's engagement in the National Theater last night.

It is a play that delves deeply into human nature, sets off character without exaggeration and achieves a profoundly moving denouement that once again stamps its author as one of the most penetrating, most facile and most substantial of the playwrights serving the contemporary theater.

There have been earlier demonstrations of the Anderson penchant for utilizing mechanics as a corollary of a sound and workable philosophy of human life. In his present work he permits his central character to invent and construct a machine that destroys time and enables its operator to transport himself to any day in any year. Stephen Minch employs it, as an experiment to test its efficiency, to go back to that Fourth of July when the church choir held its picnic, in 1902, and reverse the whole course of his life from that point on.

His life seems to have been a failure, his wife misses the piano for which they cannot keep up the meager installments on his salary of $27.50 per week from the factory that has grown rich on the profits of his genius. At the breakfast table she expresses the belief that he would have been one of the mighty of the industrial world if he had married Hallie Arlington, instead of her, and that she, also would have had a happier life as the wife of the suitor she didn't marry.

Relive Their Lives.

The "star-wagon," as he calls his contraption—a leveler of both time and space—makes it miraculously possible to revert from old age to youth and live their lives over again, each taking the course he thinks would have afforded the more abundant life. After this seeming "dream," all concerned in its unhappy revelations reach a completely unanimous and wholly logical conclusion that their lots were better as they were in the beginning.

To the fashioning of this engrossing drama Maxwell Anderson has brought a quality of honesty, a simple directness and a skill in the shaping of "situations" that amply account for the long run of the play on Broadway. Abandoning, for the time being, the blank verse style of lyric writing that characterized "Mary of Scotland," "Winterset," "The Wingless Victory" and other of his majestic works, Anderson here devotes his attention to the simpler forms of speech, the spirit of spontaneous comedy and a minute dissection of human impulse and character.

There are moments, to be sure, when his lines become poetic, but "Star Wagon," in the large view, is down-to-earth "theater" with such deep and universal appeal as to arrest the enthusiastic attention of any lover of the playhouse.

The choir rehearsal and picnic scenes are gems of picturesque realism that recapture the reminiscent spirit of an era that was called "Victorian." They were greeted last night by the heartiest applause of the evening, and there was a great deal of hearty applause in the National last night.

Jo Mielziner has set the play with appropriate regard for its divergent periods and contrasted social strata and Guthrie McClintic, the producer, has supplied a cast that does adequate justice to the Anderson text.

Three Who Star.

Those in the three pivotal roles do the play considerably more than adequate justice. Burgess Meredith and Lillian Gish, in the roles of Stephen and Martha Minch, reveal a remarkable facility for leaping the years. They have the happy faculty of being either their own youthful selves, or elderly people in the twilight of life, with no loss of effectiveness or conviction in either metier. Mr. Meredith, I believe, has not been seen on a local stage since "Winterset," nor Miss Gish since she played Ophelia to John Gielgud's Hamlet. Their joint appearance in "Star-Wagon" raises this week's engagement at the National to the status of a major theatrical event. They are closely matched in the excellence of their portrayals by Russell Collins, who appears as Hanus Wicks, third of the drama's stellar triumvirate.

There are others, too, who contribute no little to the full success of a satisfying evening in the theater. Foremost among them, I should place Mildred Natwick as Mrs. Rutledge, the acidulous choir leader and indefatigable chaperon; Jane Buchanan, in the role of Hallie Arlington, the "other" wife, and Barry Kelley, as Duffy, the business tycoon, who couldn't make a go of it during that strange "dream," either. Keenan Wynn, son of the famous Ed, acquits himself with fine credit in his one brief scene as a hired thug, bribed to steal the "star-wagon." The supporting ensemble is up to the measure of the demands made upon it.

Mr. Anderson has injected a potent tincture of his economic philosophy into "Star-Wagon" and thereby given it added zest. Six curtain calls at the end of the last act were its meed of favor last night at the hands of an enthusiastic audience that should have been much larger than it was.

Vacation.

Dennis O'Keefe is planning a Mexican vacation following his role opposite Maureen O'Sullivan in "Hold That Kiss." After visiting friends in Mexico City, he will proceed to the coast, where a friend of his lives, and the two will cruise and fish off the Lower California coast. He will then return from Hermosillo to Hollywood by steamer.

Lessons in Perfect English Are Given By the Abbey Players, Here Next Week

Company Coming to National Are Experts in Speech; Hat Campaign Bears Fruit; Miss Bradna to Meet First Lady; a Movie Star Calls; About Miss Granville, Best of the "Brats;" Notes of the Theater.

WE HAVE said a good deal in this space through the months about the quality of English that is spoken by the Abbey Theater Players from Dublin. There still remain things to be said on the same topic.

BELL

Voice culturists and diction teachers throughout the country eagerly await the coming of this group of consummate artists to their respective bailiwicks because they speak the purest English to be heard across the footlights. It is English, to be sure—or maybe Irish—but it has a quality which seems to be given only to these Dubliners to express; a softness, a liquidity, a resonance that make the spoken word a delight to the ear.

In equal measure, stage directors everywhere study the methods of this governmentally subsidized acting company, the only one of its kind in the world. The Abbey Players' incomparable "team work," the result of many years of association of the members of the ensemble, and the easy naturalness of every actor in his role, are no less than superb and lend added value to every scene they play.

They express themselves, and their authors, with a vast economy of physical effort. Beyond the capabilities of any other acting group of which I am aware, they "live" their roles and omit all of the usual theatrical abracadabra. This, of course, is largely the result of the training that each member of the cast receives before achieving top rating in the company—a matter which already has been gone into in some detail here.

This is brought up again for no reason except that the Abbey Theater Players will be seen in the National Theater next week in a repertoire of their best plays and all of us will go to school once more and sit at the feet of the theater's greatest teachers.

Well, something came out of it, after all. I mean that business about women wearing their cockeyed hats in the theater and refusing to take them off, no matter what the annoyance occasioned those sitting behind them. At Loew's Capitol Theater this week a "trailer" is being run which re-echoes some of the sentiments that have been expressed by this column, from time to time, in the matter of the ridiculous headgear being worn by the unfair sex in this day of bizarre fashions. We have sat uncomfortably behind leaning Towers of Pisa, oversize phonograph discs, inverted flower pots, Cossack turbans, shakos, flowering gardens and goodness knows what else, and there never was anything that could be done about it this side of mayhem or murder. I have been on the verge of both, but with that sturdy old Bell restraint I have kept my hands off the offenders and my shooting irons in their holsters. Strength of character, that is what it is!

But there is a possibility that this "trailer" on the Capitol screen will have a salutary effect—and an equal possibility that it will not. However that may be, it is a nicely gotten up conceit which offers a suggestion without proferring an insult to the wearers of this crazy feminine millinery that obscures the screen from the vision of those for miles around.

I understand it was inspired by this column's occasional blasts against a particularly pernicious form of feminine cruelty to the animals sitting around them. If the Loew gesture does any good, I will be the first to say so.

When Olympe Bradna—and that first name still is "O-Lamp"—arrives in the National Capital on Thursday, she will not have to wait long before fulfilling one of her "fondest expectations." This would be meeting Mrs. Roosevelt, wife of the President.

Paramount's young star, ever since arriving in this country, has wanted to meet the First Lady. That meeting will take place at the White House on Thursday afternoon, the Fates being propitious. Despite one of the busiest schedules by which she ever has been confronted, I am informed that Mrs. Roosevelt graciously will "take time out" to satisfy the wish of one of her most ardent admirers.

This, of course, will be the highlight of Miss Bradna's personal appearance tour, which already has embraced—or will embrace, before she completes her rounds—Denver, Kansas City, Dallas, Houston, St. Louis, Chicago, Milwaukee, Indianapolis and New York.

Following her brief visit here O-Lamp will proceed to Philadelphia and from there will return to the Coast to begin work in Paramount's production of "Air Raid," her next starring film. We have already told you, sketchily, about her first, "Stolen Heaven," opening at the Capitol on Friday.

And the week's schedule of social goings-on, incidentally, is beginning to clarify itself a bit. The Warner Brothers executives, out of deference to the Variety Club and that famous columnist and all those distinguished guests, due to gather in the main ballroom of the Willard Hotel tonight, have deferred their "Adventures of Robin Hood" cocktailing, eating and seeing party until tomorrow night. It will begin in Julius Lulley's Harvey's Restaurant and then adjourn to the private projection room in the Earle Theater Building.

But Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's, has complicated things a little by scheduling a screening of Ginger Rogers' next picture—and it will be next at Keith's—for tomorrow afternoon. I ask you again, when does a fellow sleep and maybe get some work done?

But you meet so many interesting people!

So who barges into the office but old Panjandrum Stephen E. Coehran, all steamed up over his new summer theater project out Olney way. But that wasn't the major purpose of his call. He had in tow Peggy Ann Garner, his very young and diminutive protege, and her parents.

Little Peggy Ann—she can't be over 4 or 5 years old—already has appeared in "Little Lady Luck" on the West Coast and is a likely prospect for several more pictures. Probably the next in which she will appear will be "Spawn of the North," "Gone With the Wind"—when, as and if—and "The Wizard of Oz."

Peggy Ann is a bright and precocious youngster and should do as well as many another juvenile player, even if she never becomes a second Shirley Temple. Shirley Temples and Jackie Coogans only come along once. I wish the young lady all of the "breaks" she so obviously deserves.

* * * *

And speaking of that "Wizard of Oz," that is the picture in which Ray Bolger expects to make his greatest screen hit. The dancing comic has been cast in the role of the Straw Man, created by Fred Stone on the stage 'way back yonder when the team of Montgomery and Stone was first coming into "big time" prominence. Dave Montgomery has been dead these many years, but Fred Stone, an aging, but still youthful character actor, still is flourishing in Hollywood and should be of great assistance to Ray in perfecting the niceties of his role in one of the theater's unique musical comedies. I wonder who is going to play the Tin Man?

On this page today appears the likeness of Bonita Granville, who will be seen on the Earle screen, beginning Friday, in "The Beloved Brat." The talented Miss Granville has the reputation of being one of the most ornery youngsters on the screen—and she is. But she is not like that away from the studios.

I am told that off-screen, Bonita is an amiable and wholly charming girl. Before the cameras she is a potential hell-cat, as hell-cats might be at an early age. This remarkable ability of this young actress to take on every semblance of cussedness has kept her in great demand by all of the studios having traffic with kids who need to be spanked. If she doesn't watch out, her true nature will be as greatly distorted in the public mind as that of the late Jean Harlow, who was grossly misjudged by reason of the roles she portrayed on the screen.

Bonita, by the way, is the daughter of the late Bernard "Bunny" Granville, a former "Follies" and vaudeville star, who was one of the best dancing comedians of his day. Odd that Bonita should not have inherited something of his penchant for comedy, instead of a decided flair for being "nasty."

* * * *

Eternal-Unities Note.

To old-timers in the theater, it may not seem so strange that a Granville should have turned out to be a "barker."

Luminaries of Screen and Stage

Left—Phil Regan, popular tenor of stage, screen and radio, who returns to Loew's Capitol on Friday to headline the stage bill. Right (above)—Bonita Granville, the screen's foremost exponent of juvenile vixens, to be seen on the Earle screen, beginning Friday, in "The Beloved Brat." Inset—A new portrait study of Tyrone Power.

Lewis and his chief aide, John Brophy . . . When Pageboy Cone, who acted as president of the stock exchange on Boys' Day last week, rang the 10 a. m. bell to start the trading, he asked, "What's the next step?" Jimmy Reynolds, member of the exchange, offered: "Naturally—to the reformatory."

THE PROGRAM for WOR's "Music for Today" broadcast is arranged and conducted by Morton Gould. This week he received a phone call from the station's publicity department and was asked, "What numbers have you scheduled for next week's show?" . . . Gould, who always lists his program in advance with the press department, thought this was a gag and replied: "First we'll play Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, followed by 'Star Dust,' 'Limehouse Blues' and 'Ti-Pi-Tin'" . . . Mr. Gould, however, just discovered that it was no gag and will play these numbers—because that was the listing which appeared in WOR's weekly press release.

JOHN ERSKINE, Ursula Parrott, Heywood Broun, Gene Tunney and the other great Thinkers who are associated in the publication of the Connecticut Nutmeg, held their first official directors' meeting in the newspaper's new offices last week . . . These American notables who are engaged in liberation of Great Thought, transacted their first official move at this meeting. They voted, unanimously, to change the phone number from New Canaan 1580 to New Canaan 1587, and to change the P. O. Box from 1085 to 1087—because "7" is a lucky number.

JOHN CRAVEN, son of Frank Craven, made his stage debut in "Our Town," which just won the Pulitzer Prize. On the night when the prize announcement was made, Producer Jed Harris sent a telegram to John, reading: "I think you'd better be told the facts of life about the theater. Someday, I'm warning you, you're going to appear in a play, and it won't win the Pulitzer Prize" . . . Shirley Temple volunteered, with the consent of her parents, to appear in the Greater New York Fund show at Madison Square Garden this week. The officials, however, declined the generous offer—explaining that she wouldn't attract the kind of people they wanted to have attend.

Shirley Fetes Bird At Birthday Party

Probably the strangest party since the Mad Hatter's and Alice's tea party was held last week on the "Little Miss Broadway" set at Twentieth Century-Fox.

It was a birthday party, and there were only two present—Shirley Temple, the picture's star, and Penguin Pete, who, as the only trained penguin in the world, enjoys a featured role in the picture.

When Shirley heard that it was Pete's third birthday, she decided that the day should not pass without a celebration. The "birthday cake" with three flaming candles stuck in it, was a pound fish.

Ocean Debut.

Though she is an accomplished swimmer, Jacqueline Laurent, youthful French actress, hadn't ever been in the ocean until she came to California and Hollywood.

Stage Lures.

HOLLYWOOD With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., May 9.—What a laugh I've been getting out of the hue and cry of the stars and their agents who are making such a fuss over an ad paid for by the exhibitors.

HEDDA HOPPER.

In this advertisement, as you may have heard, the Independent Theater Owners' Association asked producers to wake up to the fact that too many high-priced stars are poison at the box office—Stars like Mae West, Edward Arnold, Garbo, Joan Crawford, Hepburn, Dietrich, Kay Francis—their dramatic ability unquestioned, but their draw at the box office, nil.

Of course, it's old contracts that still bring these "stars" their fat weekly checks. In order to get some return on the investment, the studios put them in "B" pictures. As that doesn't make 'em, a better draw, the theater owners suffer plenty, too—enough to have come right out with a page ad calling a dud a dud.

Why should "stars" get so upset over something they have known for a long time? Or doesn't Hollywood bother to read financial returns on its pictures?

What is star material? I've been asked that so many times in the last few days. You've only to open your eyes and see. Shirley Temple, Sonja Henie, Jane Withers, Myrna Loy, Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy. They're all so human and don't appear to be acting, which is the finest kind of acting. They give you a glow like someone switching on a light in a dark room. You feel you could pour out your troubles and they would understand. Even if they couldn't help, just their sympathy for the bad spot you're in would give you a life.

There should be huge signs in every studio, reading: "Don't forget to be yourself at all times." Whether good or bad, that's honest. And when people are shopping about for true values—16 ounces to the pound, wool a yard wide—that goes right down the line to the box office.

They put their money down for honesty, not fake. Nothing synthetic. We're not on prohibition any more. In the good old days, when you had more dollars than sense, you'd go to see anything. Let's face it; those days are gone forever. So take a hitch in your belt, Hollywood, and go back to the realities that put you over in the first place. Stop insisting on this and that. Stop complaining. Stop messing about with communism, and thinking it's smart to turn left instead of right.

See if you can hold and entertain the public on a bare stage, without a million dollar production to prop you up. Then you'll find out if you are a star, and rate the spoiling you've been getting. And you won't have your feelings hurt by the men who try to sell your pictures and keep you on top, where you once had a secure foothold.

Nice to know that Hollywood isn't falling behind in lawsuits. There are more actors in court these days than politicians. That's something—not much, but something.

Understand they're doing the Susy-Q outside the Rev. Violet Greener's Occultist Temple since she crashed the headlines and may save $150,000 for Squire Harry Clifton, English philanthropist. Or is he?

An elaborate musical setting, comparable to the music in the Deanna Durbin pictures, is being prepared by Universal for the Hope Hampton vehicle, "The Road to Reno."

The picture, based on I. A. R. Wylie's novel, starts this month and will be the studio's first major release this autumn. Edmund Grainger will produce it.

Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson, contract tunesmiths, have been assigned to the writing of an elaborate musical repertoire for the opera star-actress.

Smart Dinner Is No Place For Gorging

Hostess Annoyed by Those Who Delay Table Service.

By Margaret Wallace.

The most annoying of the dinner "pests" in Washington are those who expect second helpings at formal affairs, according to one of the city's leading hostesses.

"I have crossed some persons off my dinner list," she recently said, "because they ask for second helpings of any dish they desire. Now I admit such a request is quite proper at a small or family dinner if the guest is on terms of real intimacy with the family, but no one, not even a member of the family, should request or expect a second helping at a formal dinner.

"The service at such a dinner is supposed to go like clockwork and a guest who asks for any deviation from the routine will confuse the waiters and destroy the uniformity of the service. I was amazed at a dinner I attended recently when I heard a woman who would have been expected to know better complain that she could not eat her roll without butter and ask the waiter to bring her a little dab of butter to put on the side of her plate.

Everybody Else Waits.

"At a recent luncheon I was still more amazed to hear one of the guests ask the waiter for a second helping of the main dish, although the salad was being placed before all the other guests and the main course service had been taken away. This woman refused to relinquish her plate when the waiter attempted to move it.

"The luncheon was served at separate tables for eight and our table, of course, finished last and held up all the others, upsetting the hostess' plans for a bridge game before her guests had to go to other engagements."

This hostess is entirely right. It is only at a family dinner table that it is proper to ask for second helpings. Many hostesses have the dishes passed twice and then it is proper for the guests to help themselves. Of course, it is not proper to pass the salad or the dessert a second time.

It is not good form to make any remark at all to a servant. The custom some people have of praising the food to those serving it is only permissible at a family dinner or at a public banquet.

The type of guest who comments on the food throughout a meal to the hostess or dinner partner is also guilty of very bad taste.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Loves Man She Attracted on Rebound, But He Still Loves Other Girl; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: About a year ago I met a young man who attracted me immensely. Shortly afterward, he called me and started seeing me about once a fortnight. Most of the time, however, he talked about a blonde he was much in love with. It seems she didn't love him, constantly broke dates with him, left him at dances to go home with another man and openly admitted she went about with him only to make the other man jealous. He thought, however, that if he hung around long enough she would change her mind, and he once said that he loved her so much it didn't seem possible that she couldn't love him.

Then one evening he took her to a dance and she simply ignored him, dancing all evening with the other man and finally going home with him. He was so angry that the next day he took her out and slapped her face. That was their last date, in May of last year. After that, we kept steady company and I grew to love him more each day. He said, however, that he could not marry me until he was sure he could love me at least a little, and that the other girl still seemed to be on his mind.

• • • •

A month ago I was taken to the hospital for an emergency operation. He visited me every day, and on one visit told me he wanted to marry me as soon as I recovered; that he had found he really loved me, after all. So when my friends came to see me, I told them I was to be married and wrote my parents to that effect. Two days after I came home from the hospital, I mentioned marriage to him and he said that while he had really meant it that day in the hospital, he now feels he doesn't love me enough for marriage. The day after he had proposed, the blonde had telephoned him and while he was quite rude to her, telling her never to call him again, he has since been thinking of her.

• • • •

I still love him; in fact, I love him more each day. I'm hurt about his changing his mind and wonder if I should stop seeing him, or just wait hoping he will make up his mind eventually. I feel silly, too, having to tell my friends and parents that I'm not going to be married after all.

• • • •

He says, over and over again, that the blonde is "vacuum minded," that he is glad he broke with her because he now sees how worthless she is, but he cannot get her off his mind. I suggested that he marry me and maybe he would soon forget her, but he says he will not marry me until he knows definitely that it will last. He admits he loves me, though not in the way he loved the other girl. He is a fine person, except for this one thing; he has never intentionally hurt me or caused me any worry, is most devoted and admires me tremendously. We are 26, and I know I can never love another as I love him. Please advise me. STUCK.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR STUCK: Your young man is hardly worth bothering with. He is at once too egocentric and too washy-washy. Objectively appraised, his conduct is not much more meritorious than that of the so-called "blonde." Such suffering as she has dealt out to him should have taught him—if he had the intelligence and sensitivity to profit from experience and the courage and generosity to act on that knowledge—how wretchedly unfair it is to keep a person in love dangling in suspense. He considers himself very badly used by the girl (as perhaps he has been, although he didn't have to tolerate it; most of his suffering has been of his own inviting), but it never occurs to him, apparently, that his treatment of you is no better.

• • • •

Any man with his eyes open to what is going on, who will permit a girl selfishly to use him as a mere social convenience, is falling definitely short of a self-respecting standard of contact. When, in addition, he parasitically feeds upon some other girl's devotion as a means of consoling himself for needless suffering, his conduct becomes, in my opinion, downright despicable.

• • • •

If, after a year's courtship and proposal of marriage, this man still doesn't know whether he wishes to marry you, it is high time (in blunt words) for you to kick him out. It is my belief that his supposed love for the other girl is mostly fevered imagining; that the pain which he attributes to a broken heart more probably stems from lacerated pride and frustrated infatuation; and that the greatest impression she has made on him was the affront she offered to his ego.

• • • •

I think it very likely he is more realistically and more compatibly in love with you than he ever was or could be with her, but he is like a child who refuses to stop bawling over and regretting the loss of one broken or denied treasure, even when there is thrust into his hands another gift which he knows, in his heart, is better fun and more worth having. There is a pronounced element of obstinate poor sportsmanship in his attitude.

• • • •

If you want him for a husband, you probably can have him very readily by the simple expedient of putting yourself out of his reach for a while. In other words, tell him since he doesn't know, even today, whether he wishes to marry you, your own deduction must logically be that he doesn't want you and hasn't the courage to say so. Tell him, that being the case, that you see no point in continuing a dead-end association; that you don't propose to moon after him as he has so long mooned after the other girl; that it has been too graphic an example of sheer futility to be ignored, so far as you are concerned. Then go out with other men, and muster the self-protective common sense to reject five out of six of his subsequent invitations, until he shows up flourishing a marriage license, literally or figuratively. Matter-of-Fact Attitude Toward Sex Taught Children in Swedish Schools

Children There Are Kept Out of Doors as Much as Possible.

By Genevieve Reynolds.

SEX is no mysterious bugaboo or perplexing problem to the small children and mothers of Sweden. It is a matter of fact, natural phase of life—so made by its method of presentation in the nursery schools, according to Miss Anna Holmberg, of Sweden, who is in Washington observing nursery schools and other educational institutions.

For many years teacher in the Frobelinstitutet nursery school in Norrkoping, Miss Holmberg came to the States a few weeks ago to study the methods of pre-school instruction in Boston, New York, Chicago, Cincinatti and other large cities. She was educated at the training school in Sweden, Frobel Educational Institute in England, Peslalessi Frobelhoses, Germany, and has attended educational conferences throughout Europe.

"Even very small children in Swedish nursery schools learn about sex by watching the birth and death of animals," relates Miss Holmberg. "They do not think it unnatural or crude. Neither do they form vulgar misconceptions of its place in life. The things that they see about them are adapted to their own lives."

Muddle of Theories.

Too much emphasis is placed upon revealing the facts of life to small children in the United States, she believes. And the whole matter becomes a muddle of theories to parents and of too little understanding to the child.

While sex is by no means made an issue or part of the nursery school curriculum it becomes another necessity that is taken, when it arises, in the straightforward, intelligent, unassuming, Swedish stride.

It is the policy of the Swedish nursery school to teach the children the real fundamental things in life. "For example," explained Miss Holmberg, "we stress simple healthful living, bodily development rather than personal achievement or fame. We think that a normal life is more to be desired than a consuming ambition to be the next president or king. And we feel that this can be best accomplished by acquainting the children with nature. To do this, we keep them out of doors as much as possible, always giving them freedom in their play. But we provide ways to keep them active at all times."

No Rest Periods.

Unlike the American nursery schools the Swedish nursery schools do not provide or advocate rest periods. Instead they encourage more play, according to this visiting educator. "However," she said, "our children are not so nervous or restless as your children and probably do not need the intervals of rest after eating."

She attributes the nervousness among pre-school children here to the high speed of living in this country. "When I first arrived in this country I was so overwhelmed with the hurly-burly and bustling that I was almost ready to return home immediately. It is so different from our serene, leisurely way of living," she said, good naturedly.

Further carrying out the idea of play she said that children are not allowed to read or write until they are 7 years old in the Swedish nursery schools. "Of course," she added with a twinkle in her alert blue eyes, "a few extraordinarily bright children learn to read and write before that age in spite of our rules."

In addition to emphasis of freedom of play and perfect health the Swedish nursery schools teach consideration of other children's happiness; give a sense of responsibility; teach the children how to get along with other people, reports Miss Holmberg.

"All children need to grow up with a sense of responsibility," she said. "And to inculcate this desire we give each child some little task to perform each day.

"Consideration of other people's happiness is a lesson that small children need to be taught by example with tact and understanding. Otherwise," she continued, "they develop into selfish egotists. And unselfishness is absolutely essential to getting along with their playmates and fellow workers amiably."

"Do you think the American children are spoiled brats?" Miss Holmberg was asked.

"No," she replied smilingly. "They are not spoiled brats, but they aren't as polite as our children."

Lively, enthusiastic and keenly alert to her new surroundings, Miss Anna Holmberg, nursery school expert from Sweden, happily steps into the garden at the Y. W. C. A., where she is living, to get a breath of fresh air and sunshine.

BY THE TIME you read this (I hope) that song horror of the hour, "Ti-Pi-Tin," may be fading from the loud-speaker. Not that we don't like the silly little tune, but it has been one of those rages from which there is no escape save total deafness or death.

ALICE HUGHES

Its composer, an ample Mexican woman named Maria Grever, has been around town taking a few bows, making some new friends and, I trust, collecting some large sordid checks for her hit. I wanted words with this woman who walked into New York's Tin Pan Alley, cuffed it smartly on the nose and walked off with the spring smash of 1938. I had them, and they were amusing.

I find that Maria has been famous in a lot of places before she knocked America's ears into a tail-spin. "In Mexico they call me the interpreter of their soul," says the senora. And does that song sound reminiscent, as most pop numbers do? Of course it does, and Maria is first to admit it.

"I take 'Ti-Pi-Tin' from a Viennese waltz and a Spanish song," she says. The latter you'll recall as an old favorite. It's the middle part of number. "Also," says the composer, "I wrote the song in four minutes." So genius is the infinite capacity for taking pains, hey? Well, maybe that still goes! And the Grever pulled a very fast one. Disgusted with the lack of co-operation on Broadway, she actually published "Ti-Pi-Tush" herself, thus getting two cuts at composer and publisher instead of mere royalty. That was very smart!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Whenever, as rarely happens, I accumulate an unwanted pound of flesh, I call in my masseuse, named guess what? Miss Savage, and, indeed, she is a powerful woman, and rubs and thumps me something terrible. I want a good beating or nothing—no patty-pats for Aunt Alice. The other day I sent Miss Savage to work on Patricia O'Malley, queen of American Airlines. The next day Pat phoned feebly and quavered "Don't you know anyone a little gentler than this Miss Slaughter?" Fearless in the air, this Pat, but I fear a sissy at heart!

Now that beautiful Hope Chandler has married one of the young Messrs. Hearst and retired from the glamor business, Jackie Gately has been picked by James Montgomery Flagg as the New No. 1 Broadway Beauty. Don't tell Dad!

Mr. Christy, inspired hair-doer from Parker's Landing, Pa., has turned his genius loose on the heads of little girls whose hair doesn't curl, no matter how many carots they eat. He has enormous success in giving the tikes "naturally curly hair"—with a razor shaping the hair's natural direction, after setting it with water, a comb and a dab of cotton. Now, I suppose, no New York lass need go through life cursing her straight thatch. Hail to Parker's Landing and Mr. Christy!

Your Figure Madame!

90 Days' Reducing Will End That Incessant Craving for Rich Food.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE WAY SOME OF you reducers carry on when you go on a diet, anyone would think you had been given a life sentence on bread and water. It's all in your mind . . . I can prove it to you!

Suppose you want to lose 20 pounds. All right, that will take you three months. Three months! Why, that's practically forever, as you will testify from your experience on a three-day diet! Well, three months is just ninety days, diet or no. It is not a day longer than the time in which a 90-day note would fall due.

Perhaps the way to make time fly on a reducing program would be to sign a 90-day note the day you begin your diet.

But, more seriously, the neatest trick of your 90 day's slimming is the change it will make in your food habits. Right now you may think you will never cease to crave all the forbidden foods, but you have a surprise awaiting you. By the end of three months you will definitely have lost that incessant craving for rich food.

Take the question of lean meat . . . No doubt you have been taking the fat with the lean, relishing Mrs. Sprat's portion most. On your diet you must make it a rule to eat only the lean part of the meat. To make sure you follow this rule, trim off the fat before you take a bite, otherwise you may forget and eat it. Another thing that makes it easier to give up the fat is the fact that, since it contains two and one-fourth times as many calories as protein, you can have twice as much lean meat for your calorie allowance. You will gradually begin to prefer the lean meat.

Since the breads and cereals in the reducing menus are limited, it is well to take these foods in the form of whole grains as a source of vitamin B. And you may think you can never learn to like whole wheat bread! At the end of three months you will like it as well as white bread, and if you continue eating whole wheat bread for an entire year I'll wager that you will be perfectly willing to donate your share of white bread to the starving Armenians.

For the majority of overweights trimmings have formed the most important part of the menus. Hollandaise, mayonnaise, cream sauce and cheese are the items you will miss most on your diet . . . but three months can even change that.

Desserts are the weak link in your change of food habits. You will have to call on your will power and limit yourself to two desserts a week to keep your fine figure after you have finished your diet.

Appetite grows on you, but so does the habit of eating a normal amount of food. The three months it takes to lose that 20 pounds will make a big change in your appetite.

Keep your diet balanced as carefully as your bank record.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

The Pharisees.

"You know it's a funny thing about me—I just don't make close friends any more."

"Me either. It seems as if all the women you meet are so—well, you know what I mean. And I'm not overcritical or anything like that."

"Well, of course, I know I've got my own faults, but just the same—well, just how many people do you meet that are really . . . I just can't express it, but——"

"I understand. The trouble is that with about 99 per cent of women—well, when you come right down to it, there's something lacking."

"Isn't that the truth? There's always something——"

"Now, I'm terribly tolerant. I know everybody can't be alike. But just the same——"

"Well, you just take our club. Now I'm terribly fond of all the girls, but there's not more than 10 per cent who are really—well you know what I mean."

"I know. But I think 10 per cent's pretty high. When you come right down to it how many can you name?"

"Well, there's us, of course—I know that sounds funny, but I have to start somewhere—and anyway——"

"Well, anyway, I'd say we were—well, you know. All right, go on."

"There's us, and then there's Mabel, of course, and Barbara and Lydia and, let's see . . . Aline, that's six, and I guess Pearl——"

"I wouldn't count Pearl."

"Jane? Well, I don't know. There's just something about her . . ."

"Well, as far as that's concerned, I wouldn't back Aline too far in a crisis."

"Anybody can behave in a crisis. It's in the little things . . . And you know Aline always does do her share of the sandwich-making."

"Yes, but she's not really a BIG person."

"Well, maybe not. All right then, that leaves you and me and Mabel and Barbara and Lydia—5 out of 60 women.

"Say, I'm not so sure about Lydia. She's pretty dumb."

"Yes, but after all, she's got a good heart——"

"Still I think she's a little—well, you know—when you get down to it."

"Well, I don't know about Barbara . . ."

"This is the way I feel about it. I like Barbara and all that, but I do think there's something about her . . .

"Well, if you leave out Barbara you've only got you and me . . . and Mabel . . ."

"You know I wonder about Mabel . . ."

"So do I. I suppose she's really a fine person, but . . ."

"Well, when you get right down to it, there's something lacking . . . Say, do you know what! If we strike out Mabel that leaves only you and me!"

"Out of 60 women!"

"There you are! Is it any wonder a person can't find congenial friends?"

"I should say not. You know the more I see of other people, the more I enjoy my own company."

"Me, too. I can have the best time of my life all by myself."

Enthusiastic Naivete Fans' Choice in Girls

"The sympathetic type of young woman, dressed with a dash of modern sophistication and enthusiastic naivete in complimentary tones of common sense, sentiment and romance, is the most popular," according to Irna Phillips, author of the C. B. S. dramatic series, "Road of Life." Miss Phillips has conducted a private popularity poll for several years by holding up her numerous women characters to analysis.

"I also find that dwellers in large cities have a greater interest in the so-called 'sweet and simple' type than do those in rural sections," continues the author. "However, the margin by which the feminine type classification wins proves her a favorite over all others."

Bostrom's Luncheon To Start Swedish Fetes

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Beginning with the luncheon to be given today by the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Wolmar Bostrom, the social calendar from now until midsummer will have a noticeable quota of Swedish events. The climax will come next month with the visit to America of H. R. H. Gustav Adolphus, Crown Prince of Sweden, and Crown Princess Louise, who will arrive in time to attend the 300th anniversary celebration of the first Swedish colony in Delaware. Their itinerary includes a trip to Washington and to Hyde Park, where they will be feted by President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

HOPE R. MILLER.

This afternoon from 3:30 and 6:30 o'clock scores of Capital celebrities and social notables will attend the opening of the Swedish Government Tercentenary Art Exhibition at the Corcoran Gallery of Art. Invitations to the private preview have been issued by the president and trustees of the gallery. The exhibition, which already has been shown in a number of cities, has been arranged for display here under the auspices of the Crown Prince of Sweden and the Minister of Sweden. The latter returned from New York Sunday evening to help complete arrangements for the opening today.

When I stopped by the Corcoran gallery yesterday afternoon to interview Dr. Gustaf Munthe, who is in charge of the exhibition, the Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom were there, looking over some of the 400 pieces of art that will be shown to a select group this afternoon and will be open to the public through May 29. Dr. Munthe, a tall, handsome man with nicely chiseled features and a sense of humor reflecting itself in his twinkling blue eyes, has been in this country since February and has arranged the exhibition in a number of cities. Early in June he will take the display on to Philadelphia and Wilmington, where visitors to the Tercentenary Celebration will have an opportunity to see it.

Display Spans 8,000-Year Period

While his assistants tacked up vivid tapestries, arranged Viking swords and gleaming gold jewelry in glass cases, and hung huge oil paintings in the second-floor rooms devoted to the exhibition, Dr. Munthe told me something of the purpose and scope of the display.

It spans an extensive period, "at least 8,000 years—from the Bone Age to the current century," he said. He further explained that the exhibition divides itself into several parts. One section is given over to pre-historic art—bone arrowheads, stone implements of the Neolithic Age, earthen vessels dug out of ancient tombs; flint axes and daggers, brooches and necklaces of silver, gold and bronze, dating to thousands of years ago. The oldest object in the lot is a bone arrowhead from the period of about 6,000 B. C.

Peasant art—including harness bows, distaffs, tables, chairs, cupboards and chests, heavily ornamented and intricately executed—comprises a second section; while portraits and landscapes representing the best works of Swedish masters from 1650 to 1900 make up still another part of the impressive exhibition.

Purpose to Portray History of Sweden

The display was brought to this country by invitation from a committee representing a number of American museums, Dr. Munthe said. Its purpose is to bring the America public into closer contact with the Swedish nation, its history and spiritual background.

This is Dr. Munthe's fifth trip to America. He arranged the Swedish pavilion for the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, and he has a wide acquaintanceship with many art directors and art enthusiasts in this country. When the display of which he is now in charge first was brought over to America last September, he was not with it. He arrived in February and has traveled with it since then. He expects to be in this country until August, when he will return to his home in Gothenburg, where he is director of the museum of decorative art.

The pieces included in the exhibition, which you are sure to hear widely discussed in Washington the next two or three weeks, are from the National Museum and the Museum of the North in Stockholm.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

YESTERDAY, in a Georgetown garden where Union officers gave concerts at the time of the Civil War, Mr. and Mrs. Walter White entertained at a strictly modern cocktail party.

The informality which suddenly hits Washington in the spring after a winter of deadly social seriousness was very much in evidence. One guest had discarded her stockings and the hostess topped off a white - and - lavender satin frock and a matching corsage of orchids with a wool cardigan.

DUDLEY HARMON.

A HIGH brick wall, exactly the mellowed red shade of the old house, entirely surrounds the garden, insuring absolute privacy. From the terrace stretches a grassy slope, dotted with huge old trees and flowering shrubs which none of us city slickers was able to identify. Over the wall is the carefully manicured garden of the James Roosevelts, where the tulips and hyacinths are in full bloom.

Here's an idea for your next al fresco party. Why don't you place in a corner of the yard, as our hostess did yesterday, a gaily painted wheelbarrow and put therein a vase of bright flowers, a tea tray and an antique metal box filled with cigarettes? Besides its pictorial value, the wheelbarrow placed at the opposite end of the buffet on the terrace aids in grouping people and keeps them from "ganging up" near the source of food in typical Washington fashion.

SEEN at one end or the other of the White's garden yesterday were, among others: Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister; Keith Officer of the British Embassy, who occupies the Georgetown house which the Whites had last year; Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, the latter looking sunburned after a stay in Kentucky and Hot Springs, and Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken, who will entertain this afternoon at their annual party for members of the American Bar Association.

MRS. HAMILTON BRYAN, who was there with Commander Bryan, told us that she will be off shortly with her young daughter to spend the summer in Europe. Mrs. John Magruder, another guest, is preparing to do the same thing via the freighter route.

Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding was noted chatting with Mrs. Brinkley Smithers, who leaves the first of next month to take up residence in Worthington Valley, near Baltimore. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Darlington, Mrs. Lewis Clark and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Feis represented State Department circles at the party.

Miss Jane Watson, who came with her housemate, Miss Eileen O'Daniel, was very smart in a navy blue chiffon dress with a little tucked jacket in a crimson shade. Mrs. Mondell Gregg, Judd Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilson, Dr. and Mrs. William McClellan, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Ross, Miss Laura Tuckerman, Mrs. Floyd Waggaman, Mrs. William T. Mann and Frau Herbert Blankenhorn were others who arrived early and stayed late.

GUESTS at the christening yesterday of the young daughter of the Secretary of the Belgian Embassy and Mme. Walravens were pleased to discover the existence of an old Belgian custom. Each person present was given a big box filled with candy in shades of pink and white (it would have been blue and white for a boy). The christening took place at the Belgian Embassy with Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, the Ambassador's wife, serving as godmother. The baby didn't cry once.

Mrs. James Gives Luncheon at Home

Mrs. Albert James entertained at luncheon yesterday in her home on Meadow lane, Chevy Chase, Md. Pink roses centered the table and were used also to decorate the drawing room, where guests were received. Talk turned frequently on books and bookmakers, as the company included guests who have won acclaim either as writers or artists. The hostess herself, who writes under the name of Ida Elaine James, is the author of a recently published book, "Gossamered Glory," which has attracted wide attention.

Among the guests were Mrs. Grace Dupree Ridings, Texas writer, who is making an extended visit in Washington; Dr. Emily Maxwell Maddox, Mrs. Samuel Wassell, Mrs. Harriet Hawkins Chambers, and Mrs. D. A. McDougall.

Newspaperwomen's Club Sets Reception Monday

The Charge d'Affaires of the Irish Legation and Mrs. Robert Brennan and the Abbey Players will be honor guests at the reception to be given next Monday evening by the Newspaperwomen's Club of Washington. The party will follow the opening performance at the National Theater of the Players, which is being sponsored as a benefit by the Newspaperwoman's Clubs.

Miss Katharine Brooks is in charge of reservations for the reception, which will be held at the Admiral.

29 D. C. and Md. Women Leave for Kansas City

Mrs. Lloyd Biddle Heads District Delegates to General Federation of Women's Clubs Triennial Convention Opening Today.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Twenty-nine women from the District of Columbia and nearby Maryland boarded the "Whitehurst Special" at Silver Spring yesterday at 12:46 p. m. and will reach Kansas City shortly after noon today for the opening of the triennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs this evening.

Headed by their president, Mrs. Lloyd Biddle, delegates from the District of Columbia were Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, Mrs. George Cook, Mrs. Charles Langley, Mrs. H. K. Fulton, Mrs. John C. Shaw and Miss Alma Preinkert. Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt went as chairman of radio for the general federation and Mrs. Walter W. Husband as chairman of the clubhouse committee.

The annual business meeting of the District Federation preceded a dash for the train. It was opened at the Roosevelt Hotel at 10 o'clock, with Mrs. Biddle presiding, and more than 50 members were there for the routine necessary to comply with the by-laws setting the second Monday in May as the meeting date. After the reading of the minutes and discussion as to whether the report of the nominating committee should be presented then or May 23, the date to which the meeting was recessed, the session adjourned without the report. Mrs. Biddle rushed home for her bags and off to the train. She arrived at the station with Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass, recording secretary of the District Federation, in plenty of time and smartly dressed in a light blue suit with hat to match and a white blouse.

Among those there to see the delegation off were Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel, candidate for president, whose name will head the ticket when it is announced by the nominating committee; Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, another candidate for the same office, whose name will be presented from the floor; Mrs. Ernest William Howard, Mrs. E. Morgan Pryse and Mrs. Charles Merlkern.

• • • •

The Maryland group which left the Silver Spring station was headed by Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, past president of the Maryland State Federation, who went as delegate from the Chevy Chase Club. Others were Mrs. Walter L. Redrow, also a Chevy Chase delegate; Mrs. Elmer C. Mayberry, president of the Prince Georges County Federation; Mrs. J. Enos Ray, of Hagerstown; Miss Marie Mount, College Park; Miss Adele Stamp, College Park; Mrs. James Davis, Suitland; Mrs. William Parvin Starr, Riverdale; Mrs. George B. Merrick, Upper Marlboro; Mrs. W. I. Nalley, Mount Rainier; Mrs. J. Howard Hopkins, Mrs. Charles O. Appleman, College Park, and Mrs. Hunter Edelin, of Waldorf.

Mrs. W. W. Welsh, of Rockville, 82, was the veteran member of the Maryland delegation. Other Maryland women were Mrs. Grace Ryan, of Kensington; Mrs. Ernest L. Bullard, Rockville; Mrs. Frank Wilson, and Mrs. George Nimas, of Rockville; Mrs. Upton D. Nourse and Mrs. Robert W. Allmutt, of Dawsonville.

The little red station at Silver Spring buzzed with excitement as train time approached. Delegates were greeting each other, saying good-by to friends and relatives and checking to be sure their baggage was on hand. The youngest person there as the train pulled out was little Elizabeth Ryan, whose auburn curls shone in the sunlight as her mother held her up so she could wave to her grandmother, Mrs. Ryan, long principal of the Kensington School.

The Governor of Missouri, Lloyd C. Stark, will address the convention in Kansas City tomorrow afternoon and, following the session Mrs. Keyser will drive to Jefferson City as guest of Gov. and Mrs. Stark, to attend a dinner they are giving at the executive mansion. She is a former resident of Richmond, Mo., and has many friends in Missouri.

Among others on the train yesterday were the president of the Delaware Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Louis Drexler, and three others of her federation; and Mrs. John D. Robinson of Wallace, N. C.; Miss Virginia Addison, of the Woman's Club of Annapolis and Anne Arundel County.

At Cumberland a large party joined the special and also at Clarksburg. Women of the Eastern Shore and a large party from Baltimore were on the train when it arrived at Silver Spring.

The candidate for first vice president, Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, went last week and also the new Maryland federation president, Mrs. Harry L. Harcum, of Salisbury, to be there in time for preliminary board meetings.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

TWO SPEECHES were made yesterday by members of the Jed Johnson family, but only one was of the prize variety, and that was made by "the Missus." While Representative Johnson was telling members of the Woman's National Democratic Club why the New Deal is popular with the younger generation, Mrs. Johnson was talking at the final luncheon of the Congressional women's public speaking class. The party was held at the A. A. U. W. headquarters with Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, president of the Congressional Club, as guest of honor. Each member made a talk and, at the end, Mrs. Johnson's was voted the best.

Mrs. Hugh Butler has conducted the class for wives of members of Congress who have been brushing up on speech-making, many of them preparatory to "stumping" for their husbands in the campaign. Mrs. Harry Englebright, vice president of the club, presided.

First-Voters Flock to Banner Of Democrats, Women Told

Representative Jed Johnson, of Oklahoma, addressing the Woman's National Democratic Club at its weekly luncheon yesterday, asserted the young people registering to vote for the first time are swelling the ranks of the party. A survey he has conducted in every Congressional district of the United States as chairman of the speakers' bureau of the Congressional committee shows that the new voters are overwhelmingly Democratic, he said.

Young people are taking an interest in voting such as never before, Representative Johnson declared, citing the registration in five primaries which he had studied in different sections of the country.

He credited the CCC camps, the Youth Administration and the appointment of young men and women to boards and bureaus as being responsible for the popularity of the party with the youth.

"The President has taken them into his confidence," said Mr. Johnson, who himself is known for his interest in the youth measures. "More than 2,000,000 young men have been helped in the CCC camps, and given training there during the past two years which has built up their morale," he said. The parents of 99 per cent of them are on relief. More than 10 per cent of the high school and college graduates have received help enabling them to pursue their educations as they could not have done without the aid of the Youth Administration.

There was talk at the luncheon yesterday of the annual spring fete of the club, which will be given May 18 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Bruce Kremer, in Spring Valley. Mrs. John Nance Garner heads the patroness list.

Penwomen Head Picks Aides Here

Audrey Wurdemann Auslander, newly-elected president of the National League of American Pen-Women was here yesterday from New York to conduct the first meet of the board under her administration. It was held at the Willard and was devoted to routine business and committee appointments.

Mrs. Auslander appointed Ruby Nevins as chairman of organization; Leila Pier King, membership chairman, and Grace Thompson Seton, chairman of national awards, an office she has held for several years.

Other chairmanships still to be filled are those of ways and means, clubhouse and publicity. The league maintains its headquarters in a suite at the Willard Hotel but owns property at Thirty-sixth and Prospect, once the home of E. D. E. N. Southworth, which was purchased some years ago with the idea of converting it into a clubhouse.

Mrs. Auslander will return to New York tomorrow, but will be in Washington again in two weeks and will call another board meeting to work out details of the year's program.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Washington, May 10.

War apparently broke out on the playground of a school attended by the tots of many official families here. The 5-year-old came home in a militant mood and enunciated a policy which Secretary Hull might as well adopt as the American foreign policy: "People pinch me, I pinch people!" he said. "People bite me, I bite people!"

CAPITAL CAPERS: Trembling with awe, a Western tourist entered the Senate gallery—to find Senator Norris on his feet reciting "Three Blind Mice" . . . Ambassador Troyanovsky was at the ball game the other day; wait till Stalin hears of that! . . . Representative Scott Lucas, who will be the next Senator from Illinois, was first on the Hill to blossom out in a straw hat; blamed his wife for it.

In the furore of the Supreme Court fight Senator Bridges, foe of the bill, was stretched out in a chair in the Senate barber shop, his face covered with a hot towel . . . Into the barber shop galloped Senator Ashurst, valiant defender of the bill, looking for Senator Prentiss Brown, of Michigan, who was on the fence, to tell him a secret.

* * * *

Now, between the curves and contours of Bridges and Brown there is considerable resemblance . . . . Mr. Ashurst espied the shrouded figure in the chair, leaned over and began to whisper a bit of White House strategy, intended for Prentiss, into Bridges' ear. . . .

Bridges didn't bat an eye—or an ear; he didn't move a muscle. Ashurst departed unaware that he had played into the hands of the enemy. Maybe that towel beat the court plan.

Hugo Eckener's expedition to Washington, to obtain American helium for German dirigibles in time to use it to celebrate his seventieth birthday, ran smack into an embarrassing rumor now prevalent in the Capital.

This gossip hints that Goering now plans to confiscate the Catholic Church's property in Germany to help finance his four-year plan. It reached the ears of key American officials invited to meet Eckener at a dinner at the German Embassy.

Some of the money so acquired might be used to pay for the helium . . . Which complicates Dr. Eckener's birthday celebration somewhat.

If you're a stickler for historical accuracy, you won't run around saying that George Washington was the first President . . . In several offices in the Capital hang pictures of 14 American Presidents who preceded Washington. Their names are Randolph, Middleton, Hancock, Laurens, Jay, Huntington, McKean, Hanson, Boudinot, Mifflin, Lee, Gorham, St. Clair and Griffin.

* * * *

These gentlemen served as President of the Continental Congress between 1774 and 1789, when that was the highest office; Peyton Randolph was the first . . . Better phone your tot's teacher and straighten her out; it's a shame to mislead the young.

"the palm to the dictators"

I hear that some of the chaps who hailed Hitler in Vienna with an insulting phrase ink-stamped on their outstretched palms got down to Rome in time to hail Mussolini and Hitler together. The phrase was a version of "phooey." One was arrested in Vienna, but the others got by O. K., so the story goes.

* * * *

Quite a few patriots seem to think that the desterilization of gold will mean that you can now get a $20 double eagle to carry as a pocket piece, or a $5 gold coin to make into a locket for your niece . . . Over the Treasury's dead body you can!

DIPLOMATIC DIDOES: Despite the prevalent Washington attitude of cold scorn for the Hitler regime, the German diplomats in Washington remain personally popular, and quite deservedly so. The Dieckhoffs, Thomsens and Scholzes of the Embassy group behave themselves socially with consummate tact and impeccable poise . . . Frau Thomsen and Frau Scholz are among the most attractive women in Washington. . . . (I haven't see Frau Dieckhoff.) Occasionally a brash American asks a German, "But surely you can't stand that guy Goebbels!" It's a diplomat's job to take such a query in his stride. Incidentally, Counsellor Thomsen hurried over to Rome to act as interpreter for Hitler and Mussolini; he's a favorite of Il Duce . . . He ought to know all about their confidential chat when he returns to Washington soon.

Health Clinic Rule Change Given Court

By-Law Revision Filed as Amendment to Declaratory Suit.

G.H.A. Freed of Liability for Failure to Furnish Service.

Changes in the by-laws of the Group Health Association were made public yesterday when it was learned that the association has filed in District Court an amendment to its petition for a declaration of rights which is now under consideration.

E. K. Neumann, attorney for G. H. A., said that the by-law changes, made by the board of trustees on May 2, were designed to "explain the intention and operation" of the association more adequately. He said that members would continue to get the same service now furnished.

The original by-laws provided that the corporation would not "assume responsibility for furnishing unlimited medical service to members but will do so only to the extent of its resources."

Amendments Made.

This provision was amended to point out that the organization "does not guarantee that it will provide any or all" of the specified medical services, and that it "shall not be liable to any member or his dependent in any manner whatever if it should for any reason, including lack of funds, be unable to procure any or all" of the medical attention mentioned.

Another change provided that the organization board of trustees shall contract with physicians "for and in behalf of" the members. The by-laws had said originally that the board would "employ" a medical director and assistants.

It was not known last night whether the changes in the by-laws would meet objections to G. H. A. that have been voiced by J. Bach Moor, superintendent of insurance for the District and by United States Attorney David A. Pine. Moor had charged the G. H. A. was functioning as an insurance corporation while Pine had declared that it was, in effect, operating in violation of the District healing arts act.

Both Pine and Moor were named in the G. H. A. suit filed last January when G. H. A. sought a District Court opinion on the legality of its operations.

Weighs Court Action.

Dr. Mario Scandiffio, who was expelled from the District Medical Society for making a contract with G. H. A., said last night that he was considering legal action to force his reinstatement.

He declared "the way seems to be pointed out for me" by an article in the current Yale Law Review, contending that the Medical Society might be guilty of restraint of trade in forbidding its members to engage in group practice.

"I may appeal first, as the article suggests, to the judicial council of the American Medical Association," Scandiffio said. "But I am definitely planning to look into possibilities of court action."

Woodridge Group Holds Iris Show

The Woodridge Garden Club held its annual iris show last evening at the Sherwood Presbyterian Church Hill, Twenty-second street and Rhode Island avenue northeast. Chairman P. G. Nevitt had the aid of the following Department of Agriculture employes as judges: J. M. Adams, Marion Shull, C. E. Gersdorf and Howard Watkins.

Mrs. A. L. Foster was awarded the American Iris Society Medal for having largest number of points in the show. The best iris seedling was entered by Prof. J. B. Parker.

Winner in the most artistic arrangement was Mrs. M. C. Kissinger; different varieties winner was George Gee, and best arrangement of collection of ten was A. E. Hester. Other point winners were J. W. Hardey and George Targett. In the children's class, Charlotte Weiss got the prize for those under 13, and Betty Gamble for children 13 to 16.

400 Attend First Ball Of Legion Labor Post

Two hundred couples attended the first inaugural ball of the newly organized Department of Labor Post No. 42, of the American Legion, held last night in the Mayflower Hotel.

Guests of honor included Charles V. McLaughlin, Assistant Secretary of Labor; W. Frank Persons, director of the United States Employment Service, and Edward Shaughnessy, deputy commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Watchmakers Convene in Capital

Southeast Unit For Auditorium On Constitution

Businessmen Plan Victory Dinner to Celebrate Bridge Passage.

Indorsement was given a proposal to erect a municipal auditorium at Third street and Constitution avenue in a resolution adopted last night by the Southeast Business Men's Association, meeting at 314 Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

The association protested "the dumping of raw sewage" into Anacostia River in the last two weeks, charging that the people of Southeast Washington are being deprived of "the use and enjoyment of Anacostia Park."

Citing two accidents on Pennsylvania avenue southeast within the last 36 hours, the group reiterated its demand for traffic lights on that thoroughfare at Second, Fifth and Eighth streets southeast.

Plans were announced for a "victory dinner" of the business men's association and all Southeast citizens groups to celebate the passage of the appropriation for the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge. Members of the Congressional District committees will be present at the affair, which is to be held at 7 p. m. May 19 at the National Press Club.

Hillcrest Association.

An income tax was recommended as the "most equitable means of taxation for residents of the District," by Representative Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, last night at a meeting of the Hillcrest Citizens Association.

Doughton also expressed approval of a voting privilege for District citizens and assured members he would vote for District suffrage should the matter come up for Congressional action.

The association later voted to communicate with the Potomac Electric Power Co. and the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., to request that telephone and power lines on Alabama avenue be grounded to prevent the necessity of destroying trees.

Stanton Park Citizens.

Condemnation of working conditions at Gallinger Hospital was voted by the Stanton Park Citizens Association last night. The action was proposed by Curtis E. Chadwick.

Last week employes of the hospital held a mass meeting to protest inadequate personnel to carry on the functions of the hospital, long working hours and infrequent vacation periods.

Harry Stull, president of the association, commended the organization secretary, William J. Bartle, and members of his committee for their "splendid work" in getting out city's third largest suffrage vote in their precinct.

Piney Branch Group.

An investigation of overtime hours in the Police Department was voted by the Piney Branch Citizens Association last night.

The association named a committee to look into records that members of the department are required to appear as court witnesses in the daytime and to work late at night.

A letter was sent by the organization to Representative Collins, chairman of the House sub-committee on District Appropriations, demanding demolition of the old Tuberculosis Hospital.

Candles Keep Time in Science Academy Show

Age-Old for Telling Hours Devices Displayed for Horologists.

Candles that tell time and hour glasses that keep track of minutes as well as days were on exhibit yesterday at the National Academy of Sciences as the Horological Institute of America held its annual meeting.

The institute, its membership drawn from the watch and clockmakers craft, heard delegates from various sections of the country discuss problems currently facing the industry.

W. C. Trent, of the areonautics instrument section of the Bureau of Standards, described recent tests of lubricants used in timepieces under sub-zero conditions. Although the tests are not complete, he said, fish and mineral oils are being developed which keep delicate airplane instruments in perfect working order at temperatures far below freezing.

Clepsydpa Displayed.

Methods of measuring time from the days of cavemen to the modern means of recording fractions of seconds were traced by various speakers. Reproductions of early timepieces, copied by L. C. Eichner, of Bloomfield, N. J., were on display.

Among these was the old water clock, or clepsydpa. Under this principle of keeping time, a bowl was placed on water, gradually sinking as the liquid seeped in through a small hole in the bottom. A certain period of time was recorded when the bowl finally disappeared.

The candle method was first established in medieval England. Stripes were painted on the candles and as the tallow melted, each stripe that disappeared represented an hour.

9 Named to Council.

Scholarships were awarded to Clyde J. Pecotte, Hornell, N. Y.; Frank H. Curtis, Moline, Ill.; Worth L. Davis, Great Falls, Mont., and James B. Drummond, Peoria, Ill., for the best grades in the year's examinations.

Liquor Dealer Robbed Of $380 and Clothes

Slum Project Set Here; End Of Row Seen

Ihlder to See President Today; Bids Will Be Opened Thursday.

Plans for a new slum-reclamation project on V street northwest were announced by the Alley Dwelling Authority yesterday as Nathan Straus, United States Housing Administrator, predicted that the controversy over Washington housing legislation soon would be settled.

Straus asserted he was "very confident" that he and John Ihlder, executive officer of ADA, would reach an agreement on amendments to the District alley dwelling act in time to submit the proposals to the present session of Congress.

The projected legislation would permit ADA to accept money from Straus' agency for slum-clearance and low-rent housing. At present, the District authority operates as a unique branch of the Government, distinct from all other local housing authorities in that it has no power to borrow from USHA.

Bids Due Thursday.

The V street development, for which bids will be opened Thursday, will consist of a group of one-family houses on the historic site known as "The Camp," between Fourth and Fifth, V and W streets northwest. Accommodating 18 colored families, the project will displace 11 alley houses on Blands Court and 10 dilapidated street dwellings.

Final specifications for an apartment house to be erected on an adjoining site are in course of preparation. The one-family houses each will contain four rooms and a bath and will face a grass plot bordered by concrete walks and benches.

Straus, who Sunday publicly charged Ihlder with "delay" in acting on the proposed amendments, stated yesterday that in a routine weekly conference with James Roosevelt, the President's secretary, the District's housing troubles were "hardly discussed." Ihlder is scheduled to see the President today.

Sharp Letters Traded.

In a sharp exchange of letters, Straus had told Ihlder he was "alarmed" by the fact that the latter had permitted a month to pass without discussing the amendments. He indicated that unless the proposals soon were offered to Congress, a $10,000,000 Washington building program might be deferred for another year.

Replying that Straus himself had been guilty of delay, Ihlder asserted that the administrator's proposals had been under careful consideration ever since they were received on April 7.

It was understood that some District officials considered Straus' proposal to extend USHA grants and subsidies to the District as satisfactory on face value, but ultimately capable of throwing the ADA program "off balance."

Hitherto Self-Supporting.

The Alley Dwelling Authority heretofore has maintained its slum-reclamation program on a self-sustaining bases. Straus claimed that if his proposals are accepted, large sums would be made available to the District for subsidized housing "for those underprivileged groups who cannot possibly afford to pay full economic rent."

The principles involved in the Alley Dwelling Authority's stand on slum clearance and low-cost housing were indorsed yesterday by the board of directors of the Council of Social Agencies, at a monthly meeting at the Y. W. C. A.

The board voted approval after a special committee reported that "loans from the USHA should be made under conditions that would not jeopardize the District's slum clearance program or restrict the benefits of low-cost housing."

Two Ill Senators Reported Better

Senators Hughes of Delaware and Reames of Oregon were reporter recovering from ailments at Naval Hospital last night.

Capt. George C. Thomas said Senator Reames was "convalescing" from pneumonia and that Senator Hughes, who had gone to the hospital for "observation" about a month ago, was "up and around and improving slowly."

Also recovering from a severe illness was W. J. Sears, former Representative-at-large from Florida and now a member of the Board of Veterans' Appeals. Sears, who lives at the George Washington Inn, suffered an attack of acute indigestion Saturday and for a time was thought dangerously ill. Physicians last night believed the danger past. Sears is at Garfield Hospital.

Sen. Logan Says Church Fails to Conquer Fear

The Christian Church has failed today because it has swerved from its central purpose—to help man find eternal life—said Senator Marvel M. Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, speaking last night at the Church of the Holy City at a meeting held under the auspices of the New Jerusalem Church, now in its annual convention sessions here.

Senator Logan told the audience "we need men and women in the church who can reason out the teachings of God and not be dominated by superstition and fear."

"We need a religion," the speaker asserted, "that man can hold up to the light and see, a religion that can be understood."

"Because the church has failed to help man to find eternal life, the outlook for religion is very dark," he stated.

On the same program was the Rev. S. J. C. Goldsack, delegate from Great Britain, who said "our organized church has not yet awakened to the fact that the ecclesiastical and catechestical presentation of theology is antiquated and archaic and the need and demands are for more theology that has a practical bearing upon human interests."

"In regard to the prevention of disorder, the reformation of social wrongs, the challenge to national evils and the formulation and the advocacy of ideals," asserted the clergyman, "as an organization we are sadly at fault."

The meeting was a feature of the seventh day of the convention, which was marked by the re-election as president of the Rev. F. Sidney Mayer, of Baltimore. Other officers re-elected were Lloyd A. Frost, of Cambridge, Mass., vice president; Benjamin A. Whittemore, Boston, secretary; Horace B. Blackmer, Malden, Mass., assistant secretary, and Albert P. Carter, treasurer.

Motorman Found Dying in His Home

Louis R. Kendall, 31-year-old motorman, died last night in Casualty Hospital of a bullet wound in the back of his head. Police, who found Kendall in the bathroom of his home at 1718 West Virginia avenue northeast, said he had shot himself with a .25 caliber automatic revolver.

Kendall is survived by his wife, Ruth Ellen, and two sons.

Bill Is Drafted To Give District City Assembly

Group of 15 Would Advise Congress Committees, Commissioners.

A bill to provide Washington with a municipal assembly of 15 members, acting in an advisory capacity to the District committees of Congress and the Commissioners, was drafted last night at a meeting of the elections committee of the campaign council of the Citizens Conference on District Suffrage.

The committee will try this week to find a Congressional sponsor for the bill, according to William H. Mondell, chairman.

Ten members of the proposed municipal assembly would be chosen from 10 election districts, while five assemblymen would represent the city at large. Their term of office would be two years.

The draft bill sets up a board of election judges consisting of the police and municipal judges of Washington, who would divide the city into ten voting precincts and determine eligibility of voters. Candidates for the assembly would have to prove citizenship of at least three years in the District, while voting would be confined to persons who have been citizens here for a least one year.

The draft legislation would go into effect immediately upon passage by Congress. "We hope to get it through by June 30," Mondell said, "and catch the next fiscal year."

"This is offered solely as an interim measure," explained Mondell, who supervised the April 30 referendum in which more than 80,000 Washingtonians voted for full self-government. "We feel the bill would be a logical corollary to the present investigation of reorganization of the District government, so citizens here can have at least an advisory voice in the process."

Walker Addresses Legal Group Here

A scarcity of attorneys trained in administrative law presents wide field for young lawyers, Commissioner Paul A. Walker, of the Federal Communications Commission, told members of the Phi Delta Phi legal fraternity of George Washington University at a banquet last night at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Dr. William C. Van Vleck, dean of the law school, also spoke. Profs. Charles Collier and William F. Fryer were guests.

Gunman Gets $30.

Instead of paying for the nickel's worth of ice cream he ordered, a colored man pulled a revolver on James Brooks, manager of the High ice cream store at 1543 New Jersey avenue northwest last night. Brooks gave him $30 from the cash register.

Cabin John Car Line Cut Is Disputed

Public Utilities Hearing Told Bus Use Is Impractical.

Citizens Assail Stopping Rail Service East of Union Station.

Curtailing the Cabin John-Eighth and F streets northeast street car line was discussed yesterday at a public hearing before the Public Utilities Commission.

Abandonment of the tracks from Union Station Plaza to the Eighth street northeast terminus was requested by the Capital Transit Co. and substituting bus service from Georgetown to Cabin John was suggested by the commission.

There was no answer from the commission regarding the transit request, but a decision, based on testimony yesterday, will be forthcoming before next week, officials stated.

E. D. Merrill, president of the transit company, told the commission the suggestion to transfer service to buses from Georgetown to Cabin John would not be practical at this time.

6 Ton Bus Limit.

J. B. Ecker, principal assistant engineer for the company, told the commission a survey revealed that should buses be used the maximum weight on Conduit road beyond the District line would be limited to 6 tons, which would limit the number of passengers to 20.

Under this maximum weight, it would be necessary to keep the vehicle from exceeding 15 miles per hour, according to specifications from the District Engineer of the United States Engineers Office.

Residents of the northeast section affected by the proposal to abandon the tracks from Union Station Plaza to the terminus at Eighth street, northeast, thronged the office to protest the move.

A. D. Calvert, president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, presented a petition, signed by scores of residents of Northeast Washington, urging the commission to refuse the transit petition.

Ecker testified that traffic had decreased about 36 per cent in 20 months for the eight blocks east of Union Station and that a saving of about $4,000 a year would be realized by substituting the service to a revamped Burleith-Trinidad bus route.

Would Reroute Buses.

He said the decline was due to a shift of passenger traffic to the bus line and parallel street car lines. He placed the cost of street car service at $29,000 and for bus, $25,250. He pointed out, however, that if the proposal is denied by the commission, changes amounting to $62,000 would have to be made. Should the commission approve, five new buses would have to be place in operation to provide for the shift of patrons to buses, at a cost of $49,000 and garage facilities costing $11,500.

The transit company proposes to reroute the bus from E street to F street, between Union Station and Fifth street northeast.

Residents from the route along the Cabin John line also appeared at the hearing. All but one, Capt. Ellis R. King, of Potomac Heights, were opposed to the change.

The company's engineer said his firm would save yearly $25,000 by substituting a bus service from Potomac and M streets, along Conduit road through lower Foxhall Village to Cabin John. This service would not provide through traffic to downtown areas, however, he said.

Boy's Skull Fractured By Auto; Driver Freed

Richard Bitanga, 5, was hit by an automobile when he followed his older brother, Fernando, 7, across the street yesterday in front of their home at 915 Twentieth street northwest. At Emergency Hospital he was found to have suffered a fractured skull.

Police said the driver of the car was Benjamin C. Johnson, 30, of 1213 M street northwest, who was released without charge.

Business Meeting.

Kalorama Citizens Condemn D.C. Government Investigation

Sharp condemnation of the recent Congressional appropriation of $5,000 for "a Chicago firm to come here and investigate the District Government," was voiced last night by members of the Kalorama Citizens Association.

The association voted to send letters to chairmen of the House and Senate District Committees expressing their opposition to the bill which authorizes the investigation with the view to recommending a reorganization plan for the District government.

Members also opposed recent action of the Budget Bureau providing for a deduction of more than $200,000 from relief funds of the District.

Approving the action of the organization's delegates to the suffrage conference, members voiced enthusiasm over the number of votes polled and expressed hope for early Congressional action on the suffrage question. Approval was also given to the Junior Board of Commerce's city-wide clean-up program.

Nats Trounce Browns, 7 to 1, Take League Lead

The Washington Post Sports

14 WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, MAY 10, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

We have checked and rechecked the American League's vital statistics and Washington's position at the top of the league does not seem to be a misprint. There the Nats are, and, to put it bluntly, the rest of the league has 'em to catch.

POVICH.

In a horse race that may not be the best strategy — setting the pace—but in baseball the club that hustles to the front has that much the best of it. The victories in April and May count just as much as the games won in August and September. Big-league ball clubs never, intentionally, lay off the pace. The big idea is to get in front and stay there.

The season is only one-twelfth completed and there may be skeptics who say the positions at this stage aren't important, but there isn't a club in the league that wouldn't change places with the Nats.

There are factors that lead one to believe that the Nats are no flash in the pan. Firstly, they have not only been winning, but they have been winning the close ones and it is axiomatic in baseball that it's the good team that wins the close games. But the developments on other league fronts are encouraging to the Nats.

Indians Losing Face.

There are the Yankees only a half-game behind, to be sure, and bracketed with the Cleveland Indians for second place, but the Indians are fast losing face in the pennant race. Oscar Vitt's ball club apparently is in the grip of the same malady that always seized Cleveland clubs in their road games.

This was to be a different Cleveland Club, it was reported. Vitt had his team inspired, and the Indians did appear inspired as they swept through the West and stepped into a commanding lead before embarking on their first Eastern invasion. But since coming East, the Indians have begun to look remarkably like other Cleveland clubs which have holded miserably on the road.

In their seven games in the East, thus far, the Indians have won only three, and two of those victories were at the expense of the weak Philadelphia club. No longer are the Indians the pennant threat they were supposed to be.

New York critics, blithely dismissing the Washington club, are now tabbing the Red Sox as the team to beat. But that is understandable. The Manhattan scriveners have seen the Red Sox beat the Yankees four times in six games this season. Thus, their wholesome respect for the Boston club. But what they didn't see was Washington whipping the Red Sox handily in two out of three games at Griffith Stadium recently.

Detroit's Tigers, mired in fifth place, have given no evidence that they are to be reckoned with seriously. As suspected, the Tigers' pitching has been sour from the start and Gerald Walker's timely hitting has been missed. The situation at Detroit was so bad the other day that Rudy York was shifted from behind the bat to the outfield.

Injuries Halt Chisox.

Chicago, which entered the race with two strikes against it, no longer looms as a pennant threat. Injuries have been epidemic on Jimmy Dykes' club. Luke Appling broke his leg and Monty Stratton hurt his pitching arm on the same day. The Sox lost their punch when Zeke Bonura was traded away and they lost their relief pitching star when Clint Brown tore a muscle in his arm last week in Washington. Two days ago, Joe Kuhel wrenched his foot and will be on the sidelines for a month. The Sox have unraveled fast.

But getting back to the Nats, it is quite understandable why they are up there in front. They have been playing winning baseball and have hurdled their former weakness against left-handed pitching. Cecil Travis has finally learned how to play shortstop and they have been getting pitching from Dutch Leonard, which is well-nigh matchless.

In fact, the Nats may not yet be showing their full strength, Zeke Bonura, despite the fact that he is among the leading run-producers in the league, has not yet started to hit in the manner in which he has been accustomed. And Johnny Stone, until the past week, was in a woeful slump. When this pair start slugging, the Nats will indeed be a powerful ball club.

And there is no evidence that this fellow Leonard is a flash in the pan. His pitching has been brilliantly consistent and in the last 28 innings he has allowed only two earned runs. Two of his victories were shutouts, and in the other he gave up only a single run.

Other pitchers who have started as brilliantly as Leonard have proved flops by midseason, but Leonard is no raw rookie. He has been pitching in the big leagues and in Class A ball for nine years and he knows how to pitch. Batters who are troubled with the delivery of a new pitcher often solve his style in later tests, but no batter likes to hit against the knuckle ball at any time—especially when it's thrown by a fellow who can control it.

Blind Dodoes.

St. Louis, May 9 (AP).—Golf Pro Denny Richter threatens to blindfold the 400 contestants who will take three shots each at the 125-yard No. 3 hole on a local course next Monday in a "hole-in-one tournament."

Three men, one starting the first round of golf he ever played, have aced the hole since the entry lists opened.

Foxx, Cronin Hit Homers, Red Sox Win

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 9.—The Red Sox, on a combination of 11 hits and 12 bases on balls, rode to their second straight victory over the Indians today, this time by a score of 15 to 3. The defeat dropped Cleveland into a second place tie with the Yankees, who were idle, Washington taking the lead by a half game.

Jimmy Foxx, with two homers, and Manager Joe Cronin, with one, featured the Sox assault on three Cleveland pitchers. But by the time Foxx clouted his four-baggers, in the sixth and seventh, Boston already had enough runs to win.

They drove Dennis Galehouse from the mound in the first, when two walks, a single, a wild pitch and Cronin's homer brought in four tallies. Rookie Bill Zuber, who followed Galehouse, gave up a run in the fourth on two walks and Cramer's double, and finally was yanked after filling the bases on passes with none out in the fifth.

Lefty Al Milnar got out of that hole with only one run charged against him, but Foxx's first homer, with two on, was the big blow in the six-run sixth inning blast, and his second accounted for two of the three runs the Sox got off Milnar in the seventh.

Young Jim Bagby, jr., although also having control trouble, shut out the Indians until the seventh and went on to win his second decision of the season. The rookie right-hander turned back the Yanks on opening day. He issued seven walks today, but held the Indians to six hits, five in the last three innings.

Terps Rout V.P.I. by 20-9

Knepley Clouts Homer; Shipley Uses Subs.

Maryland University's Terrapins swung a mean ax on the Gobblers of V. P. I. yesterday, trouncing the Southerners, 20-9, in a slow game at College Park.

Five V. P. I. pitchers were pounded for 20 hits by the Terrapin sluggers. George Wood, Terps southpaw, yielded 10 bingles to the Techites.

Maryland started the slugging activities of the day in the first inning, garnering 3 runs after V. P. I. had gone down in rapid order.

Shorty Chumbris walked and scored a few minutes later when his brother, Lefty, beat out a single. Then "Dutch" Knepley, Terp first baseman, got a round trip on a ball hit deep into centerfield.

V. P. I. scored its only run in the first seven innings in the second when Weddle crossed the plate. It scored eight runs in the last two innings after Coach Shipley sent in everybody but George Seeley, assistant manager for the Terps.

Third Baseman Cobb hit a home run and several buddies scored other runs as the Terps fourth and fifth stringers made error after error, but the Gobblers were too far behind to get within whooping distance of the leaping Terrapins.

Bees Defeat Pirates, 7-5

Pinch-Hitter Sends Home Winning Runs.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 9.—After losing extra-inning decisions on two successive afternoons, the Boston Bees, with a revamped line-up, came back today to score two runs in the tenth and whip the Pittsburgh Pirates, 7 to 5. The victory ended a three-game losing streak.

Pinch-hitter Deb Garms drove home the deciding runs with the bases loaded and two out.

After Manager Casey Stengel of the Bees had been chased off the field for arguing with Umpire Bill Klem, Cuccinello opened the Boston half of the tenth by beating out a slow roller to Handley.

English, trying to sacrifice, forced Cuccinello, but Lopez kept the Bees' hopes alive with another scratch single. After Warstler had flied out, Maggert, pinch hitting for Hutchinson, grounded to Handley, but English beat the Pirate third baseman to the bag and the bases were filled.

At this point the rival brain trusts indulged in some strategy. Reis was sent in to bat for Fletcher, so Pie Traynor took Brandt out of the box and put in Tobin. The Bees countered by sending Garms up for Reis, and the pinch pinch-hitter delivered with a single to right that scored English and Lopez.

In all nine pitchers saw service, a heavy rain hampering the hurlers considerably. Hutchinson, who worked the ninth, earned credit for the victory, while Brandt, fourth of five Pittsburgh pitchers, was charged with the defeat.

Reds Wallop Phillies, 9-4

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, May 9.—Bunching hits in five innings, the Cincinnati Reds slugged out a 9-to-4 victory over Philadelphia today to even the series.

Lacking the punch to convert—14 men were left stranded on base—the Reds took advantage of three Philly errors, and aided by Ray Davis' seven-hit performance, were able to tally in every inning but the first, sixth and eighth. Four innings during which he yielded seven blows, were enough to send Clyde Passeau to the showers in favor of Pete Sivess.

Two rookies, Hershberger and Craft, led the Red attack, each with three out of five, and Hershberger's fifth-inning double with the bases loaded was responsible for two runs.

Davis started shakily, walking Mueller, the first man to face him. The Philly second sacker scored a moment later on Klein's single and a double-killing, but thereafter, the tall right-hander yielded but two safeties until the ninth, when three singles, a double and a walk gave the visitors their final three markers.

Cards Beat Dodgers, 9-7

Medwick's Triple Sends 2 Runs Over to Win.

St. Louis, May 9 (AP).—Joe Medwick's eighth-inning triple, his fourth hit of the day, brought home the two runs that broke up a free-hitting ball game and gave the St. Louise Cardinals a 9-to-7 decision over the Brooklyn Dodgers today.

Medwick clouted his three-bagger off Buck Marrow, who had replaced Fred Fitzsimmons after the latter was taken out for a pinch-hitter, and the blow cost Marrow the ball game. Curt Davis, who relieved Bill McGee with the bases loaded in the Dodger half of the same frame, was the winning pitcher.

In addition to his triple, Medwick hit a double and two singles to drive in three runs. Leader for the Dodgers, who matched the Cards' 15 hits, was Rosen, with a double and three singles in four trips to the plate.

Trenton Gets Krakauskas

Young Pitcher Balks at His Release.

Joe Krakauskas, blond, wild-pitching southpaw of the Nats, yesterday was released on option to the Trenton club of the Eastern League, and balked vigorously at the transfer.

Refusing, at first, to report to the Trenton club, Krakauskas pleaded with both Clark Griffith and Manager Bucky Harris to send him to some other team—"any other team," he said.

"Anywhere but Trenton," urged Krakauskas. "I've had too much experience with that club—riding in buses all night and eating on the fly. It's a terrible life for a ball player."

The presence in Washington of Joe Cambria, Trenton owner, who has a working agreement with the Nats, had been haunting Krakauskas for several days. Aware that he was due for release, the rookie left-hander had hoped he would not be sent back to the team whence he came to the Nats last fall.

"I think I deserve something better," Krakauskas told Griffith and Harris. "I won four games and lost only one for you last season and on the strength of that record I ought to get a better chance. At least, I shouldn't go back to Trenton. I know I haven't been going well this season, but I showed last year that I could pitch."

Krakauskas, who had been hailed in the Nats' spring training camp as one of the most promising rookies in the league, was plagued with wildness from the outset. In the exhibition games he was unable to win. In two relief roles with the Nats this season he showed one commendable performance and in the other put the winning run on base with his lack of control.

Owner Griffith expects Krakauskas to report to the Trenton Club despite his objections and declared that steady work in a league of lower classification would cure his wildness. "He'll be a good pitcher one of these days," said Griffith, "but he isn't ready yet. He'll be back before the season is ended, I'm positive."

Former Brave Hurt.

Hinsdale, Ill., May 9 (AP).—Donald T. Laenhardt, former pitcher with the Boston Nationals, is in a hospital today seriously injured as a result of an automobile crash Saturday night. Loenhardt, manager of a finance company in Rockford, Ill., was en route to visit his mother in Chicago when the accident occurred. His wife and child escaped injury.

Leonard Gives Up 7 Hits, Gets Triple

Washington's amazing Nats zoomed into the American League lead yesterday on the wings of their sixth straight victory—a 7-to-1 job against the St. Louis Gas Meter Gang, so called because they are perennially in the cellar.

The Nats struck yesterday when conditions were favorable. Early in the proceedings at Griffith Stadium the big rightfield scoreboard showed that up in Boston the Red Sox were lambasting Cleveland, which had been holding the league lead by a half game margin. And, at New York, rain washed out the Yankees' chances to move up into the lead in company with Washington.

British Golf Draw Pairs 2 U. S. Aces

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 9 (AP).—Barring a sudden collapse of both their games, United States Amateur Champion Johnny Goodman and Ray Billows, whom he defeated in the 1937 final, will clash in the second round of the British amateur golf championship which opens May 23 at Troon.

That was the worst of a lot of bad news for the American invaders that accompanied today's draw for the championship.

Not only were Goodman and Billows drawn in the same quarter, but in adjoining brackets. Goodman meets Robert Montgomery, of Scotland, in the first round while Billows plays Raymond Quilter, of England, and from there they should go on to a match that will eliminate one of the two top-ranking United States contenders.

Besides Goodman and Billows, both members of the American Walker Cup Team, five other Americans also are in the second quarter. They are Francis Ouimet, veteran team captain; Charles (Chuck) Kocsis, of Detroit; Marvin (Bud) Ward, of Olympia, Wash.; Reynolds Smith, of Dallas, and Charles (Sherry) Munson) Yale University captain. Kocsis, Ward and Smith also are Walker cuppers.

Two other members of the team, former amateur Champion Johnny Fischer, of Cincinnati, and Charley Yates, of Atlanta, were drawn against each other in a first-round match in the third quarter.

Other American contenders are Robert Sweeny, defending champion, who is a U. S.-born resident of London; Walker Cupper Fred Haas, jr., of New Orleans, and Bobby Dunkelberger, of High Point, N. C. The name of T. Suffern (Tommy) Tailer, of Greenwich, Conn., also appears in the draw, but Tailer has decided not to compete. A Walker Cup team alternate, he originally had planned to make the trip abroad at his own expense.

In all there were 241 entrants, making up what looms as the toughest field since the Bobby Jones era.

The American Walker Cup players, headed by Capt. Ouimet, gathered in New York today, preparatory to their midnight sailing aboard the Bremen tomorrow for the British amateur and the cup matches at St. Andrews June 3-4.

Tomorrow night they will be given a farewell dinner, to be attended only by the players, the U. S. G. A. executive committee, and past presidents of the U. S. G. A.

Arcaro Continues Winnings Ways, Riding 2 More

Belmont Park, N. Y., May 9 (AP).—Eddie Arcaro, winner of the Kentucky Derby with Lawrin, started where he left off Saturday at Churchill Downs when he rode Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' favored Spanish Way to victory in the first event at the opening of Belmont Park today.

The 22-year-old Newport, Ky., veteran took the lead soon after the start of the 7 furlongs and drove his 8-year-old mount home a length and a half in front of Mrs. G. H. Emick's Dark Sun by a length and a half to pay 6 to 5. Semaphore lost runner-up honors in a photofinish.

Arcaro rode his second winner of the day in the third race, booting Roll and Toss from Mrs. Whitney's Greentree Stable home in front of eight 2-year-olds in a 4½-furlong dash down the Widener chute. The victory also gave Mrs. Whitney a double.

Georgetown Prep Is Beaten, 12 to 3

Bethesda-Chevy Chase jumped back into the win column yesterday by downing the Georgetown Prep diamonders 12-3, in an eight-inning ball game played at Garrett Park.

The hitting of the Mizell brothers featured the winners' batting attack, both lads getting three hits apiece, but Fred took top honors by getting three for three. Fuller aided Bethesda's cause greatly by tripling in the first inning.

Bell, Briton Win Doubles In Two Sets

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A trifle heavier around the waist and perceptibly tired after a barnstorming tour that has taken the troupe through 80 cities and hamlets, Ellsworth Vines last night blasted his way to victory over Fred Perry, of Britain, at College Park, winning by scores of 6—3, 4—6, 6—3. An audience of 1,000 fans witnessed the match.

The coliseum floor was cluttered up with reformed Davis Cup stars as Berkeley Bell, stoop-shouldered veteral, came on to team with Perry in doubles. Bell engaged Walter Senior, former National Clay Courts titleholder in a preliminary match, and halved it, winning the first match, 8—6, dropping the second, 4—6.

Just before the featured players took the court young David Johnsen, junior Davis Cup star, was awarded the Vines-Perry trophy in recognition of his standing as the outstanding junior player in the District. Walter T. Hayes, one of the games most brilliant stars when William T. Tilden 3d was in knee-breeches, presented the trophy.

Vines Lacked Fire.

Vines' play lacked the fire and zest that marked his appearance here last year, but his burning serve was still difficult to handle, and he relied on it when pressed. He aced the thin-faced Briton no less than seven times, and each time turned the tide of battle. Five of them came in the final set, two consecutively to deuce, then win the third game.

The tall, curly-haired Californian relied primarily on his unerring placements to keep Perry at bay, however, and crossed him innumerable times with blazing wallops down the sidelines. Perry never attempted to rush the net, and it would have been suicidal to try with the American ramming shots home.

Perry was credited with a lone ace, an inconsequential shot in the seventh game of the final set. In sacrificing his usual murderous attempts at the net the houmorous Englishman took to difficult and effective cross-court placements for the majority of his points. He caught Vines several times, especially in the second set when he was at his best, but was not consistent enough with them to make any appreciable difference.

Vines' overhand smashes, which he used profusely in doubles, threatened to tear holes in the coliseum's well-oiled floor. Seldom was he forced to resort to this mode of attack in the singles, however, chalking up points when needed with unstoppable and varied assortment of forehand drives which scored clean placements and oft-times caught Perry flat-footed.

Vines the Master.

On the basis of last night's play Vines appeared to be complete master of the situation. The victory was his forty-first in the series, and left the standings in his favor by a score of 41-43. With 13 exhibitions yet to be played Vines needs only three more on the right side of the ledger to clinch the series.

The doubles were featured by the excellent team work of Perry and Bell, which overshadowed the individual brilliance of their opponents. They won in straight sets, 7—5, 6—3.

From here, Manager Jack C. Harris, who is still trying to entice Don Budge into pro ranks, will shepherd his troupe to Pittsburgh, where they play again tomorrow night.

Brandywine Wins.

Cumberland, Md., May 9.—Charles Eyler's Brandywine won the Allegany Racing Pigeon Club's 180-mile event from Athens, Ohio, with another Eyler entry, Blackie, second, while Charles Jewell's Smarty finished third.

Anacostia Nine Plays

Meets Central in Series Encounter Today.

By Perry Wilkinson.

Anacostia High and Central, neither of which has won an inter-high series baseball game in two starts, will attempt to crash the win column at each others expense today when they tangle at 3:30 p. m. in the ball yard at Central Stadium.

Coach Roland Lund will probably send Tom Hutchinson, Indian ace hurler, to the mound with the following boys completing the line-up: Seaman, shortstop; Smith, third base; Gordon, rightfield; Faircloth, leftfield; Anderson, second base; Scott, first base; Hagedorn, catcher; Solbach, centerfield.

Central has two twirlers, either of which may get the assignment according to Coach Jack Ray. They are Dick Rozelle or Dizzy DeZerne. The other positions find Smith in rightfield, Bransdorf behind the bat, Zimmerman on first base, Steiner at third base, Middleton in centerfield, Hurley on second base, DiBlasi at short, and Clark in rightfield.

In other games, Tech has been invited to play Georgetown Frosh, Briarley Military Academy plays host to Roosevelt High, Mount Rainier entertains National Training School, Charlotte Hall meets Montgomery Blair on the latter's field, and Laurel travels to Ellicott City to engage the Ellicott City High School nine. All games are scheduled to begin at 3:30 p. m.

'Mungo-to-Cards' Talk Is Revived As Bosses Confer

St. Louis, May 9 (AP).—The "Mungo to St. Louis" trade rumors were revived today when Branch Rickey, boss of the St. Louis Cardinals, and Manager Burleigh Grimes, of Brooklyn, held a long conference. Rickey admitted he was interested in Van Lingle Mungo, the Dodgers' fireball right-hander, and added:

"He is a good pitcher and I'm interested in good pitchers. We haven't made a deal with the Brooklyn club, but if one is completed it will not be a small one."

Reminded that the Dodgers are without a left-hander, Rickey replied, "I know that. We have four on our staff."

He said he did not care to answer at this time whether or not he was prepared to make a cash offer for Mungo.

Brown, Bruns On Mat Card

George Zaharias Will Appear Here.

Zaharias has been matched with Jake Patterson, the former Syracuse athlete, and one-time Marine fighter, in a special added attraction.

Orville Brown, of Kansas, and Bobby Burns, the Chicago Scot, who made such a hit in a 30-minute draw last week, will headline the show. Brown and Burns, two strappling 225-pounders, showed the fans some tricks they had never seen before.

Zaharias is the best golfer among the wrestlers and is a consistent 70 shooter. In Hollywood he is a constant playing companion of Dick Arlen, Bing Crosby, Oliver Hardy and John Montague, the Paul Bunyan of golf.

Levi Yoder And Burnett Co-Favored

Golfers Preparing for Chevy Chase Start Wednesday.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

With a majority of the top-flight contestants playing practice rounds over the Chevy Chase course in preparation for the twenty-eighth renewal of the Invitation tournament starting Wednesday, Levi Yoder and Volney Burnett jumped into co-favorite roles by scoring four over par 73s.

Yoder, defending champion and winner of the Washington tournament last week, declared he was "on his stick" after his round that found him playing the eighteenth hole with par for a 71, but taking a six for the 73. He was playing with Russ Hollebaugh, Kenwood ace, and Walter Pederson, owner of the Pederson Golf Club Co., of New York.

Burnett also went over par on the last hole in scoring his 73, but he made the finest shot of the day on the par three 249-yard ninth hole when he placed a brassie tee shot within 4 inches of the cup.

M. Parker Nolan, Congressional's "Siege Gun," and Page Hufty, main hope of the host club to win the President Taft Trophy, played together and recorded 75s. Others testing the layout, undoubtedly in the finest condition of any course in the East, were Martin McCarthy, Reeve Lewis, Dr. Howard Smith and others.

Raymond Guest, one of the world's outstanding polo players, from Meadowbrook, Long Island, was forced to withdraw his entry because of a business trip to Chicago. Other out-of-town stars, including Frank Allen, finalist last year and former Georgetown Prep star, and J. B. Ryerson, finalist in the Mason and Dixon Amateur, will practice today along with a majority of the local entrants.

Post entries and starting time changes: 9:15, Milton Schlosser (Manor) and J. P. Owen (Army and Navy); 10:10, D. F. Stace (Army and Navy) and R. G. Rogers (Army and Navy); 11:15, John R. Miller (Beaver Dam) and R. A. Keilty (Congressional); 11:50, Otto Eible (Congressional) and J. Auton (Columbia); 2:05, Bill Harvey (Manor) and W. J. Dubose (Chevy Chase); 2:35, W. B. Mason, jr. (Chevy Chase) and Frank Reeside (Chevy Chase); 2:45, Page Hufty (Chevy Chase) and J. S. Brooks (Chevy Chase); 2:40, Max Taylor (Manor) and Earl McAleer (Congressional).

Congressional Team Is Challenged

Congressional's golf team, Maryland State champion, has been challenged by the Country Club of Virginia aggregation to a series of home-and-home matches and the locals are expected to reply today and get together with the Virginians on suitable dates. The challengers suggested nearly a score of dates for the matches.

With one of the most powerful teams in District golf history, including Wiffy Cox, professional; Parker Nolan, Claude Rippy, Gene Pittman, Billy Shea, Billy Dettweiler Louis Fuchs, Earl McAleer, Bill Wenzel and Roger Peacock, the Cox-led line-up has been seeking nearby opposition.

Preakness Field Is Big Problem For Race Experts

By a Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, May 9.—The newspaper boys, who did so well in guessing the line-up for the Kentucky Derby last week, are finding the Preakness a difficult proposition. With the $50,000 added Maryland classic five days away, the field is being variously estimated at from 10 to 14. A place at the post appears assured five colts, chasers of Herbert Woolf's Lawrin in the Derby, which arrived by train from Louisville this morning.

Those unloaded were Foxcatcher Farm's Dauber, Myron Selznick's Can't Wait, William Woodward's Fighting Fox, Hal Price Headley's Menow and Warren Wright's Bull Lea.

The five horses appeared calm and collected as they were led to their barns and attendants reported that they had shipped well.

With Dauber, the "horse to beat" and Lawrin ineligible, the scribes are trying to line up the non-Derby colts which may get in the post-parade. From all appearances this group will include Fairfield Stable's Lucky Omen, Greentree Stable's Red Breast, H. P. Headley's Bourbon King, Townsend B. Martin's Bigey, A. C. Compton's Sun Egret, Wheatley Stable's Stormscud or Quick Devil, Ral Parr's Hypocrite and Mrs. W. Plunkett Stewart's Pasteurized.

The absence of Lawrin and the ailing Stagehand have served to renew hopes of many handlers who might have passed up the Preakness had the Derby developed a runaway winner. Then again, the caste lost by Fighting Fox and Bull Lea plus the fact that Lawrin, an outsider, was the winner, has made many owners and trainers Preakness conscious.

Should the starting group contain 14 horses, the Preakness would have a gross value of $72,025, of which $54,400 would go to the winner. This would be $7,500 more than Lawrin collected.

Marion Miley Wins Medal; Sets Record

Lexington Girl Shoots a 75, Five Under Par, in Dixie Meet.

By the Associated Press.

Birmingham, Ala., May 9.—Displaying a record-breaking exhibition of smooth shot-making, Miss Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., conquered a flashy field today to win medalist honors in the qualifying round of the twenty-seventh annual Women's Southern golf championship.

The attractive daughter of a golf professional negotiated the 18-hole test in 75, 5 strokes under par, a new course record.

Firing many great shots, Miss Miley led the qualifying firing from start to finish, but Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, of Chapel Hill, N. C., the national champion and advance favorite to win the 1938 Southern crown, staged a great finish after a shaky start to pull up with a 77, 2 strokes back of the medalist.

With a total of 81, a stroke over women's par, on the 6,411-yard layout, Miss Dorothy Kirby, the Atlanta schoolgirl and defending champion, qualified handily and remained among the top flight of favorite players.

Miss Kirby, who defeated Mrs. Page in the finals a year ago 2 and 1, had nines of 41-40.

Walter Haight

Pimlico Race Track, Baltimore, Md., May 9.—Arlington Park failed in its attempt to lure the War Admiral-Seabiscuit battle to its oval but developments on the horse front seem to point to the Arlington classic as the tops in the year's 3-year-old class. Providing Tranier Earle Sande brings Stagehand through his coughing spell and back into training and Lawrin's ailing hoof stays intact, Chicago will have two of the year's foremost performers at the post.

HAIGHT.

Then if the winners of the Preakness and the Belmont are tossed into the field for good measure, as well as 3-year-olds which may develop before the summer race, Arlington Park will have reason to crow.

It seems that I was wrong, definitely, in two instances last Saturday. First, I picked The Chief, batting for Stagehand, to take down the Derby. Secondly, I wrote that Lawrin's time of 2:04 4-5 was the slowest Derby since Donerail in 1913.

The less said about The Chief, the better, so I'll try to explain the "time" boner. What I meant to say was that "Lawrin was the first horse since Donerail to win with a hang-nail!" The truth is that Lawrin's time ranks with the better clockings for the Churchill Downs mile and a quarter. The colt had to buck a strong head wind through the stretch. Of course, it was a tail wind along the backstretch, but over there the stables acted as breakers.

Jockey Jack Westrope was a sick boy at Louisville when Stagehand became ill. He had every reason to be for he had believed the colt would parade through the 3-year-old ranks a la War Admiral. Westrope piloted Stagehand to victory in the Santa Anita Derby, but he could not make the 100 pounds for the Santa Anita Handicap and was forced to turn over $10,000 in riding fees to Nick Wall.

Westrope's plight is magnified by the fact that he had the regular assignment on War Admiral at the start of the 1937 campaign. He rode the Man o' War colt to victory in his first start at Havre de Grace and then scored with him at Belmont Park. After War Admiral was third in the National Stallion Stakes, Westrope was unfortunate enough to be suspended for rough riding on another horse.

With Westrope grounded, Trainer George Conway looked around for another jockey. Charlie Kurtsinger was available. He got the mount and, although War Admiral lost the Great American Stakes to Fairy Hill that day, Kurtsinger crowded Westrope out of the picture.

All hands in Louisville agreed that the 1938 Derby topped all others in the matter of drawing out-of-town customers. The track, railroads, hotels and restaurants, as well as other businesses, reported more people, but less spending than in 1937. The Derby Day betting was a million and a half, just a trifle under last year's.

Some of the old timers frowned on the big show staged in the infield almost throughout the day. During the hour preceding the big race the musicians marched, beat drums and fired guns. At this time the horses were being led to the paddock and the noisy maneuvers, certainly not a help to the horses, seemed to take some edge off the race. In fact, the usual soul-stirring "My Old Kentucky Home" and the parade to the post lacked appeal, taking on a sort of "another vaudeville act appearance."

The Maryland Jockey Club is to be congratulated. When only two 2-year-olds, the Brandywine Stable's Bull Whip and Ral Parr's Hypocrite, were entered in the $2,500 Survivor, the Tuesday feature, track officials decided to turn the affair into a match race with the purse intact. However, there will not be betting on the event.

The Maryland rules allow only seven flat races a day for betting purposes so the field in the seventh race will make an eighth contest. This will be the first time that eight flat races have been staged on a single Maryland program.

Pays $3.50 In 3-Horse FeatureRace

Crowd of 11,000 Attends Opening Program of 'Preakness Week.'

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, May 9.—The betters had only one position to worry them in the $2,500 added Jennings Handicap today, and most of the 11,000 customers present made the right selection. Pre-eminent, in the blue and white silks of Hal Price Headley, simply toyed with the two sprinters opposing him and scored an easy four-length victory. With the betting confined to first only, the 6-year-old son of Supremus paid a $3.50 mutuel.

A. C. Compton's Sun Egret, making one of his many stands of the year against older horses, was second, defeating Thomas J. Healey's Black Look by two and a half lengths.

Preeminent, under wraps for much of the route, hung up time of 1:11 4-5, the fastest of the meeting for the 6-furlong route. Earl Steffen, who arrived only this morning, rode a foxy race on the winner.

Steffen Holds Back.

Steffen had Preeminent on the inside as the three rivals ran like a team into the far turn, but the veteran rider took his mount back and let Sun Egret and Black Look develop some false courage. Satisfied that he could take them when he elected, Steffen slipped Preeminent outside entering the stretch. Asked for speed in the straightaway, Preeminent responded to bound to the front and the competition ended.

Eight cheap routers marched postward in the opening event, with the chief honors going to Brilliant Blue, the property of George Krehbeil, turf writer for the Detroit News. The 3-year-old filly headed Frank Brooke out of the purse under good handling by Mel Lewis. Calanterie picked up third money. Brilliant Blue put the favorite players off winning with a $4.60 mutuel.

J. B. Belk's Walli, a busy filly which had been forced out of the win column for six races, finally made good at a $6.60 mutuel in the second race. Orchids Next, the favorite, was second, beaten two lengths after having much early trouble. Scout About, which pressed Walli's early pace, wound up third.

Candy Hero Pays $16.30.

The winning mutuels continued on the upgrade in the third race when Lerno, representing William M. Elder, emerged from the maiden ranks at the expense of backers of seven other juvenile maidens. Lerno, winning at the third asking, paid a healthy $24 mutuel. She was off in front and never headed while winning by two and a half lengths over Critt. The Vanderbilt colors on Spots News were third.

Another long shot, Candy Hero at a $16.30 price tag, took the fourth race over the mile and 70 yards course. The gelded son of Dark Hero and Candy Queen finished three parts of a length ahead of Royal Business and Virginia Boy, which were necks apart. Five others were far back at the end. Apprentice Jockey John Howell sent the ultimate winner into command in the opening eighth.

Bounding Count, away from the winner's circle since last fall, today won on his seventh attempt of this year in the sixth race. The Watt Elliott color bearer drove to a length-and-a-half triumph over Voldear with Phantom Fox holding down the third hole. At an $8.70 mutuel the veteran son of Reigh Count was given a good ride by Apprentice Jockey L. Dupps.

Rowes Crump came from far back to win the seventh by a head over Cornwallis with Galloping, the pace setter most of the way, third. The winning gelding paid a $9.50 mutuel.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

The lady jockeys had a big time yesterday when the Pimlico track staged the annual "May Den," a Preakness week feature. Here Sara Bosley is winning on Angus, owned by her mother, Mrs. John Bosley. Mrs. A. G. Sapolas is on Ruth Lerner, second horse.

Sara Bosley Race Winner

Takes Ladies' Event at Pimlico Track.

Pimlico Race Track, May 9.—With her cap blown off and her long black hair waving in the breeze, Sara Bosley, 17-year-old Monkton, Md., miss, rode to victory in "The May Den," a Preakness Week feature for lady riders, which drew 1,000 fans to the track this morning. Miss Bosley rode Angus, a 4-year-old gelding owned by her mother, Mrs. John Bosley, owner and trainer and noted horsewoman.

Mrs. G. A. Sapolas piloted Ruth Lerner to second money, five lengths behind the winner, with Joan Thomas third on Divided Skirt. Six other "jockies" were crowded out of the money.

The race, a 5½-furlong affair, was conducted under "afternoon" conditions with Starter Jim Milton sending the field away and with Ral Parr, George Brown and Alfred G. Vanderbilt in the stewards' box. The riders wore jockey silks.

Mrs. C. Hoffman's mount, Diplomacy, wheeled at the break and was left as Ruth Lerner bounded to the front to open a wide gap. Nearing the far turn, Miss Bosley brought Angus through on the inside, sent him to the top and had the situation well in hand thereafter.

BOUNDING COUNT, reserved off the pace for a half, improved his position with a rush when called on and, under strong hand ride, drew out at the end. VOLDEAR went to the front after a quarter, ran BRIGHT GEM into defeat, but weakened at the close. PHANTOM FOX moved boldly entering the stretch on the outside, but hung in the final test.

ROWES CRUMP, outrun to the backstretch, improved her position gradually between horses, and, under good handling, wore down CORNWALLIS. N. Y. Exchange Elects Martin First Chairman

New Deal Board of Governors Is Approved by Large Vote.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 9.—New York Stock Exchange members by an overwhelming vote elected today a new board of governors to supplant the present governing committee.

Elected as chairman of the board, a newly created office, was William McChesney Martin, who is expected to act as temporary president until the board selects its full-time salaried president, as provided under the new constitution. Martin, 31, is one of the youngest members ever chosen by the exchange for an executive position. In exchange affairs he has been prominent as a progressive.

Total vote cast, as announced after closing of the polls late this afternoon, was 924. There are 1,375 members. The vote was said to be a record for an uncontested election.

The slate contained 27 names. Fifteen are members of the exchange. Twelve are nonmembers, but partners in stock exchange firms, half being from New York City and half from elsewhere.

The board of governors elected today will assume direction of the exchange next Monday. One of its first steps is expected to be the selection of a salaried president under the exchange's reorganization program adopted last January.

After installation of the president, the board of governors will be enlarged by the appointment of three representatives of the public with no exchange affiliations.

32 Governors.

The new board of governors, to consist when finally organized of 32 members including the president, will take the place of the exchange's present governing committee of 50. Today's election marks one of the major final steps in exchange reorganization program, adopted after much controversy within the exchange.

Included on the unopposed slate were six candidates residing outside of New York and who are partners of firms having their principal place of business outside of New York: Richard Pigeon of Estabrook & Co., Boston; William R. Trigg of Davenport & Co., Richmond, Va.; Ralph S. Richards of Kay Richards & Co., Pittsburgh; C. Newbold Taylor of W. H. Newbold's Son & Co., Philadelphia; Paul H. Davis of Paul H. Davis & Co., Chicago; William Cavalier of William Cavalier & Co., San Francisco.

The 15 member candidates residing in or near New York included: Edward E. Bartlett, jr., Benjamin H. Brinton, R. Lawrence Oakley, Winton G. Rossiter, H. Allen Wardle, Joseph D. Gengler, Charles B. Harding, Harry K. Smith, Jacob C. Stone, Sidney J. Weinberg, William Kurt Beckers, Robert P. Boylan, John A. Coleman, Joseph Klingenstein, Robert L. Stott.

The six nonmembers of the exchange but partners in exchange firms were John M. Hancock, Robert V. White, Robert A. Drysdale, Paul V. Shields, Gayer C. Dominick, and Philip W. Russell.

Cotton Steady; July 8.67 Cents

New York, May 9 (AP).—Cotton was again subjected to foreign selling today, but following early declines prices recovered most of their losses. July advanced from 8.61 to close at 8.67, with final prices unchanged to 4 points net lower.

Opening declines of 4 to 7 points were at about the lowest levels for the day. After the foreign markets closed, there was moderate trade price fixing and local and New Orleans buying based partly on cold weather.

Maritime Commission Signs Ship Contracts

By the Associated Press.

The Maritime Commission and the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., of Kearny, N. J., formally contracted yesterday for the construction of four steam-propelled cargo vessels for $7,980,000.

The company's bid was the lowest among the major shipyards submitting proposals last week for the construction of 12 cargo ships. Four other vessels, which will be Diesel-propelled, were awarded to the Sun Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., of Chester, Pa., which bid $8,300,000, but the contract has not been signed. The award on the remaining four ships is being held in abeyance. All the ships must be completed within 600 days.

The Market

Stocks Advance in Active Last Hour Led by Utilities; Bond Market Strong.

New York, May 9.—Financial markets began the week as though they didn't much care what happened, but toward the close more cheerful counsels prevailed and the closing was strong in bonds and stocks. Stock sales was around 1,000,000 shares, with the best prices paid on a closing spurt. Leading issues were able to gain 1 to 2 points. July wheat closed 1⅛ cents lower at 78⅜ cents a bushel.

Interest in stocks centered in the public utilities, especially in New York tractions, and in the electric equipment companies, with minor attention given the railroad shares in the late trading. Tractions were led in the morning dealings by B. M. T., I. R. T., B. Q. T. and Manhattan Railway on the fresh talk of unification. While that party was held, most stocks were indifferent to everything. A few oil stocks were pressed down, particularly Ohio Oil and Pure Oil.

Utilities Inspire Hope.

Renewed demand for utilities, which have formed the habit in recent trading of coming forward in the last hour or so, gave tone to the market before the close. Prices hardened all round. Rails increased their activity and substituted fractional gains for the early small losses. At their best, the utilities were only slightly higher, but some of them topped their best prices of a few days ago. Consolidated Edison sold at a new price for the year.

United States Steel looked harder. Bethlehem made up an early loss. Youngstown was backward. Airplanes were less active, but held firm prices. Gold mines improved, as did other metals, after a poor start. Climax Molybdenum climbed to the best prices since listing on a rise of 2 points. General Realty preferred sold at the year's best. National Biscuit made a new high at the start.

More Spending.

The cheerful abandon with which Harry Hopkins, holding a good spending job with the Administration, does away with and proposes to do away with the taxpayers' money is well known. His views on economics are equally well known, or at least they always can be guessed in advance by use of a mirror held to the text of the record of experience. Purely because Mr. Hopkins is close to the President, a confidant of the President, it may be, the opinions of the spending administration must nevertheless be used as a factor in the equation.

Hopkins, as head of the WPA, which spends most of the money nowadays and which is preparing to spend a few more billions, although much less than Hopkins would like to see go through the sieve, says he is hopeful of recovery if we only spend more money. He clings to all the fallacies of those New Deal economists who think that the Treasury should "subsidize buying power," that what is needed is more money in the pockets of the fellow who buys quick-consumption goods, regardless of whether anybody worked to produce anything or not.

Political Uncertainties.

Businessmen and the markets have shown plainly enough since the President first announced that he would inflate to the limit and prime the pump until he had it going like an artesian well that they are somewhat skeptical whether those measures will be carried out and that they are quite convinced that even if put into effect no good will come of them. The new week begins with a fair chance for the wages and hours bill to pass, which certainly will hold down longer a return of business confidence; a fair chance for some sort of financial help to be voted the railroads (without any medicine to cure the disease of low traffic and high costs); and with a good deal of confusion over what may be voted for pump priming and what may be the fate of tax revision. On the whole, business probably will feel relief over the early adjournment of Congress.

With unusually good crops in the making the country could look forward to a stimulated business this autumn were other conditions normal, which of course they are not and won't be so long as politics plays so important a role in economics. The market may be making an effort to discount autumn improvement, but it still has nothing tangible to go on. This week's operating rate for the steel industry will be 30.4 per cent of capacity, compared with 30.7 per cent a week ago and 91.2 per cent last year.

Interest Rates.

Under the double influence of decreasing demand from business and the efforts of the authorities to pile higher the excess reserves of the banks, interest rates softened in April. The fall was the most pronounced in New York, where a new all-time record low level was reported for the interest rates charged bank customers. According to the Federal Reserve Board, the average rate here fell to 2.36 per cent, compared with 2.40 in March and 2.53 per cent a year ago. In other Northern and Eastern cities the rate hardened a trifle—from 3.25 to 3.26 per cent, but it fell from 4.15 to 4.13 per cent in Southern and Western cities, a record low except for February, when it was 4.09 in those sections of the country. In 1929 money was costing bank customers from 6 to 7 per cent in Western and Southern cities, and it was around 6 per cent in New York. Still business then seemed to run along without pump priming better than it is now doing with all the priming of the 2 to 3 per cent money.

Wheat Drops; Report Today

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 9.—Prospects that the United States Government report tomorrow would confirm large unofficial estimates of winter crop yields led to 1¼ cents fall in wheat values today.

Statements minimizing chances of black rust damage Southwest were also a factor. R. O. Cromwell, a leading authority who is touring the Southwest, telegraphed from Chickasha, Okla., he had not seen a spore of black stem rust, and that he did not expect black rust to cause any important loss to the 1938 total United States winter crop.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅝-1¼ cents lower compared with Saturday's finish, May, 80⅜@80½; July, 78¼@78⅝; corn, ¼-⅝ down, May, 57¾@57⅞; July, 58¾@58⅞; oats unchanged to ¼ off, rye showing ¾ to 1 cent drop, and provisions unchanged to 10 cents setback.

State Mutual Conference.

Bernard L. Wilner, chartered life underwriter, and general agent here for the State Mutual Life Assurance Co., and six agents from his office are attending a spring regional meeting of eight company agencies at the Hotel St. George, Brooklyn. President Chandler Bullock, of the company, headed a delegation of eight officers from Worcester, Mass., where the 94-year-old company maintains its home office.

According to Mr. Wilner, who was appointed sole general agent for the company in this city May 6, attending agencies in addition to the three maintained by the company in New York City are from Newark, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Harrisburg.

According to the company's annual report in February of its operations during 92 years, State Mutual has more than $500,000,000 of insurance in force, distributed over 54 agencies in 28 States and the District of Columbia. Coverage is augmented by more than 20 district offices. The company first established an office in Washington in 1882. Until recently, Mr. Wilner had been co-general agent here with his brother, who was promoted last week to head the Philadelphia office of the company.

The Pontiac division of the General Motors Corporation will hold a meeting this morning in the grill room of the Hay-Adams House.

Com. Edison Plans Two Large Issues

Chicago, May 9 (AP).—Commonwealth Edison Co. directors today authorized the filing of a registration statement for the proposed issue of $33,000,000 of first mortgage bonds and convertible debentures of not less than $30,083,195 or more than $42,303,845. It was expected the statement would be filed this week.

The first mortgage bonds to bear 3½ per cent interest and mature in 30 years will be used to retire $30,000,000 of series A and B 5 per cent bonds maturing in 1953 and 1954, callable at $110. The debentures, for which neither the interest rate nor the maturity has been determined, will be offered stockholders pro rata at par, with each $100 convertible into four shares of stock. The proceeds will be used to retire $19,429,000 Commonwealth Subsidiary Corporation 5½ debentures due in 10 years, retire bank loans and for general corporate purposes.

U.S. Bank Units Fail to Agree on Easier Loans

Federal banking agencies failed to agree at a meeting yesterday on relaxing of restrictions on bank loans to stimulate greater extension of credit to business men, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said.

Telling reporters that State banking officials had "given every indication they want to co-operate" in any action taken by the Federal agencies, he said he had suggested the Government experts should meet, probably today, and "do a little more homework."

"We must get together among ourselves" before expecting co-operation of the State authorities, he said.

Davis, McKee, Attend.

Chief problems confronting the experts lie in uniform classification of bank loans, and valuation of portfolio assets, the latter especially important in view of recent declines in securities markets.

Govs. Chester Davis and John McKee, with Leo H. Paulger, chief of the division of examinations, represented the Federal Reserve Board at the conference yesterday.

Representing the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation were Chairman Leo T. Crowley and John G. Nichols, chief of bank examinations. Marshall Davis, acting comptroller, and William B. Folger, chief of financial bank examinations, represented the office of the Comptroller of the Currency. First fiscal Assistant Secretary Wayne C. Taylor and Special Assistant Cyril B. Upham represented the Treasury.

Loans in Big Drop.

Meanwhile, commercial, industrial and agricultural loans dropped $61,000,000 in the week ended May 4 in 101 leading cities, the Federal Reserve Board's weekly condition statement of member banks disclosed.

The statement showed also an increase of $123,000,000 in holdings of obligations fully guaranteed by the United States Government, a decrease of $69,000,000 in other securities and of $177,800,000 in reserve balances with Federal Reserve banks.

The commercial, industrial and agriculture loan drops aggregated $32,000,000 in New York City and $19,000,000 in the Chicago district.

Deposits credited to domestic banks increased $23,000,000 in the Chicago district, $11,000,000 in the Cleveland district, and $10,000,000 each in New York City and the Boston and Richmond districts.

Professor Named Treasury Officer

Secretary Morgenthau yesterday announced appointment of Roy Blough, an associate professor in the Department of Economics, Graduate School of Public Administration, of the University of Cincinnati, as director of tax research in the Treasury Department, effective June 1.

Dr. Blough is well known as a tax statistician, economist and writer on tax problems. Before joining the faculty of the University of Cincinnati he was chief statistician of the Wisconsin State Tax Commission. He was associate director of a tax study recently completed by the Twentieth Century Fund and was co-author of the resulting book entitled "Facing the Tax Problem."

He is chairman of the committee on social security legislation and administration of the National Tax Association and has acted as consultant to the Bureau of Research and Statistics of the Social Security Board. He participated in a study of tax problems for the Treasury Department in August and September of last year, under the direction of Undersecretary Magill.

Two Police Evict 30 Sit-Strikers

Detroit, May 9 (AP).—Two police officers evicted 30 sit-down strikers from the power plant of the American Brass Co. late today, a few hours after a clash between police and United Automobile Workers at the Michigan Steel Casting Co. had injured 11 persons, including two policemen.

The American Brass Co. strikers, members of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union (C.I.O.), had held the power plant since April 29, when the company announced a 10 per cent wage cut. The plant, employing 700, was unable to operate.

A. H. Quigley, vice president of the Brass company, said operations would be resumed as soon as boilers could be heated.

Victims of Felons To Be Informed Of Culprits' Term

An innovation in criminal cases was announced yesterday by David A. Pine, United States attorney. From today on, victims of all misdemeanors and felonies will be apprised by his office of the sentence meted out to the culprit.

The letters, he said, would be sent in those instances where a plea of guilty had been entered, since in a contested case the victim would of necessity be in court and would hear the sentence.

Thus, any day victims may receive something like the following: "Dear madam: The man who stole your pocketbook was sentenced to ten months in District Jail."

WILLIAMSBURG COLONIAL.
Beautifully Wooded Site.

If you would enjoy owning a house that is really individual, then we urge you to see this delightful adaptation of Williamsburg architecture; situated on a wide lot in this wooded D. C. development. From the sun-flooded south and east dining room windows, your outlook is a sylvan fairyland through which a lively little spring-fed brook threads its way across your lot. There are picturesque winding stone walls, a rock garden, a shaded "summer" living room high above the brook. There is no limit to the possibilities afforded a real garden enthusiast. You can hardly fail to appreciate the taste with which the interior has been finished. You will like the large recreation room with open fireplace, full-length windows and door opening onto a flagstone terrace. Each of the three bedrooms on the second floor will accommodate twin beds. There is a first-floor library with lavatory adjacent. First floor laundry, a plastered maid's room and a built-in garage complete what we sincerely believe to be the most interesting new house of the month.

Bob Burns Says—

I still hate to buy clothes in the city where there's so many stores and there's so much competition that the salesmen will tell you that you look pretty in pret' near anything just to get you to buy it. In a little town where they haven't got but one store, the salesman can afford to give ou an honest opinion.

It's like the time down home when a lady went in and picked out one of them new style hats that the ladies are wearin' now and the proprietor said, "All right, lady. Do you want me to wrap the hat up or do you want people to start laughin' now?"

'Other Woman' In Wife Killing Is Found Dead

Ex-Dressmaker Threatened 'to Make It Tough' on Contractor-Friend.

By the Associated Press.

Conneaut, Ohio, May 9.—Miss Theresa Ludwig, 46, whose friendship with Deuber S. Cable, prominent Canton, Ohio, contractor, was revealed during investigation of the slaying of Cable's socially prominent wife, was found dead in a garage today at the rear of her sister's home. Patrolman Steve Stofko said she committed suicide.

The divorcee's body was found in her automobile, the garage doors closed, Stofko said, and the motor still running.

Miss Ludwig had been living in Conneaut since her release from a complaint of suspicion filed during investigation of the slaying, which never has been solved.

Capt. Elmer E. Clark, of Canton police, announced last year Cable told him of a seven-year companionship with Miss Ludwig, formerly proprietor of a Canton dress shop. Miss Ludwig said she served as hostess for Cable's friends in the liquor-stocked Akron apartment which police uncovered a few days after the slaying on March 11, 1937.

Mrs. Cable, prominent Canton church worker, was killed one night by a shotgun blast while she was covering her canary in the Cables' home. Cable at the time was in Cleveland. He was held on an identical complaint, and later released.

Cable said Miss Ludwig visited him in Canton last night, appearing at the home of his brother A. B. Cable, and threatened "to make it tough" for him if he refused a demand for money.

She demanded, Cable said, that both pay for "the seven best years of her life," which she said she had given Deuber Cable.

Cable said the demand was refused and Miss Ludwig ejected from the house when she became abusive. Patrolman Stofko said several "black and blue marks" were found on her arms and shoulders.

As she drove away in an automobile, Deuber Castle said Mrs. Ludwig called out:

"You haven't heard the last of me."

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Declarers Are Only Human.

It is one thing for a defender to be guided by the declarer's play, but quite another to rely implicitly on this type of circumstantial evidence. I need hardly point out that declarers do not always play perfectly!

South, dealer.

Match-point duplicate.

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 N T	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

South's bidding was strange, to say the least. Apparently after having started with one club he felt that he could not afford to "reverse" by showing his heart suit at th etwo level. If that was his feeling he might have anticipated what was coming by starting with one heart instead of one club. South's method of bidding was huch that his major suit was never even shown, and th efact that that North would no thave been interested, anyway, was pure chance.

West sensed that an opening lead of a heart might g oup to a major tenace and, therefore, chose what seemed the safer lead of the diamond deuce. Dummy ducked, East won with the king, and duly returned his own fourth-best diamond. Dummy's ace was held up for another round, but was driven out by West's third lead.

At this point declarer's safest line of play was to lead toward the spade queen, thus making sure of establishing at least one spade trick. But, probably on the theory that a heart finesse and the subsequent establishment of a spade trick might easily produce nine tricks, declarer unwisely led dummy's singleton heart and finessed with his queen. West won and, not knowing, of course, that East had the ten of hearts, could make no better return than his remaining diamond, East winning with th eten. East now made a horrible defensive play. Probably impressed by the fact that declarer himself had started leading hearts, East shied off that suit as though it were a powder mine. West was pretty well marked with the spade ace, since declarer had not touched spades, and with four tricks home East decided to play for the setting trick. He, therefore, led a spade and West had no choice but to take hi sace. The rest of the tricks were then declarer's.

Obviously had East, after taking his fourth diamond, made the normal and logical return of a heart, the defenders would have established the heart suit for themselves before losing the spade ace. Thus, declarer would have been held to his fiv eclub tricks and two aces—a set of two tricks, which would have returned East-West a much better match-point score.

Police Sergt. George I. Hellmuth, Eleventh Precinct, will appear before a police trial board this morning on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer and neglect of duty. Pvt. Foster E. Bendure, Fifth Precinct, also will be arraigned before the board on a conduct count.
